Guilty Consciences Cause Arrest

PORTLAND, Ore., Oct. 24.—(UP)—A Portland policeman parked his foot on the running board of an automobile merely to elevate the foot while he tied the string.

Crash and a gallon of liquor from the car struck the pavement. "All right boys come along," said the officer to Jesse Sims, Palmer Peterson and Winifred Rice, "I was going along in a minute."

The trio, who spilled their liquor to eliminate evidence, were arrested on charges of breaking glass on the streets. Guilty consciences alone were responsible for their arrest. The officer had not suspected that there was booze in the car.

Even Men Prefer Men Teachers

EUGENE, Ore., Oct. 24.—(UP)—Men may prefer as they choose but the co-eds of the University of Oregon would rather have gentle men instructors and they aren't particular as to complexion. And for once men students agree with the girls, for they too prefer men professors.

This important fact was learned here following a canvass of 50 representative men and women students. Only three stated a preference for women instructors.

MOTORISTS MUST STOP AT RAILWAY CROSSINGS

SANTA CRUZ, Cal., Oct. 24.—(UP)—Motorists who fail to stop before passing railroad crossings in Santa Cruz county will be guilty of a misdemeanor, according to an ordinance passed by the county supervisors and which will become effective in thirty days. A fine of not exceeding $500, or both fine and imprisonment, is the punishment to the violator of the ordinance.

Numerous fatalities at the Chittenden crossing at the lower end of Santa Cruz county led to the passing of the ordinance, which is believed to be the only one of its kind in the state.

Legal Profession Has Its Patron Saint

The journalists have their patron saint. He is St. Paul. But the lawyers have one, too. He is St. Yves, who earned the fitting title of "The Advocate of the Poor." At his festival the refrain is said to be sung, "Advocates sed non atro, res miranda populo" ("An advocate, but not a thief, a thing well nigh beyond belief").

In pictorial art the saint is commonly represented accompanied by a cat, symbolical, according to an unkind suggestion, of the characteristics of the profession. There is a legend that when he presented himself at the gates of paradise, St. Yves was asked by St. Peter, "Who are you?" St. Yves replied, "An advocate." "Come in," said St. Peter, "for we have not yet a lawyer."

His right to be in paradise having been subsequently disputed and his removal urged, "I cannot resist," said St. Yves, "but it must be done regularly; my expulsion must be notified to me by a sheriff's officer." No such functionary could be found in paradise, and so St. Yves remained the blessed.

Sealing Wax Is Used Extensively in the Arts

Sealing wax is perhaps less important than it was before nucleage envelopes came into use, but never was sealing wax so versatile as now, nor so useful artistically. Many a delicate decorative object that appears to be enamel ware or carved and painted wood or colored glass turns out to be merely molded sealing wax. Pendants and beads and candlesticks are among the objects beholden for their beauty to this material. Molding it, many an untrained woman has done something in home craftsmanship.

A lump of sealing wax on the end of a steel knitting needle melted over a flame and cooled in a glass of water, shaped with a mold and decorated by melting in other colors became a handsome bead. A metal-rimmed pasteboard tag covered with warmed sealing wax, shaped when soft into bunches of grapes or flowers, becomes a "drop" to finish the necklace. Earrings and pins and hat ornaments are made in the same way.

Tactfully Put

J. W. Cross, who married "George Elton" (Mary Ann Evans), the novelist, spent several years of his life as a banker in Wall street and then returned to his native country. Soon after he was invited by a friend for some grouse shooting and Cross, whose shooting had got rather rusty during his stay in New York, deemed it advisable to get some coaching from his friend's gamekeeper. After a few days the host remarked to the keeper:

"How's Mr. Cross getting on, Joe?"

"Well, sir," replied Joe, "he's missing them better than he did!" Some years later, Cross told this story to King Edward, whose services Joe had entered, and the king remarked laughingly:

"I shall never get rid of Joe; that's one of the most tactful things that has ever been said."

Visiting

It's always a gamble to take children calling, as many a mother has found out to her sorrow. Sometimes they behave according to Hoyle, and then sometimes they do or say very strange things. The other afternoon mother and five-year-old Dorothy went calling and were served tea. This didn't bother mother, because she had frequently had her little daughter with her when serving tea at home, although, of course, the child's repast was limited to the cakes. On this occasion the hostess had sandwiches instead of cake. When she asked Dorothy if she would like some, imagine her surprise, and mother's chagrin at the youngster's reply: "I like cakes better, but they'll do."—Philadelphia Record.

Wyatt and His Cat

It is said that Sir Henry Wyatt, who was a peer and a member of the King's VII of England, always had his picture painted with a cat beside him, because when he was confined by Richard III in a cold and dark tower, where he had neither food to eat nor fire to keep him warm, a cat brought him regularly every day a pigeon for his dinner and kept the warmth in his body by permitting Sir Henry to caress her. He was an ancestor of Sir Francis Wyatt, one of the early governors of the colony of Jamestown.

Reduced Road Costs

Reduced expenditures in the construction of roads are predicted in the paper of A. J. Brosseau, a director of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, presented recently before the National (Crushed Stone) association convention. "In our factories we are constantly seeking to improve details so as to provide the public with improved vehicles at the same cost or even lower," said Brosseau.

Pneumatic Troubles

"My back feels terrible—rheumatism, I think." "Didn't I hear you say you'd pumped up four tires?" "Yes, Why?" "Then it's rheumatism you've got, not rheumatism."—Boston Transcript.
