Great Lover Of The Screen Star Of "Big Parade"

Portrays a Begrimed and Muddy Doughboy With Romantic Results.

Metro-Goldwyn Mayer, in announcing John Gilbert in "The Big Parade," which will be presented at the Arcade Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, suggest Gilbert as likely candidate for the suffrages of the fans as "greatest screen lover of all time."

They point with pride to his Prince Danilo ("The Merry Widow"), his James Apperson ("The Big Parade"), his Rudolph ("La Boheme") and to his spectacular work in "Bardelys the Magnificent," "Flesh and the Devil" and "The Show."

However, John Gilbert in his recent studio work has exhibited a larger virtuosity in the gentle art of inspiring romance than any other idol of the time. The Gilbert hair, eyes, profile, smile and figure are equally fascinating in all his protean changes.

A real surprise awaits the Gilbertian fan in "The Big Parade." His make-up is the "mud pack" of the trenches. All the disfigurements of "active service" are realized. Those who have seen the picture say that begrimed and dirty he is just as easy to look at—just as compelling—as when dandified. It might be mentioned that this new—and probably greatest—screen lover was born in Logan, Utah. He didn't leap to fame. He began his acting career at a tender age with Eddie Foy. He was a juvenile lead after that in western stock companies. Then he went into business. Then he took up motion picture acting. He was a scenario writer for Maurice Tourneur and later was a director. Then Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer took him up and made a star of him.

There is little question that John Gilbert not only is the screen's newest and greatest lover, but also that he is one of the wholesomest, finest and most appealing in a contagiously wholesome way to his audiences.

Renee Adoree is featured opposite Gilbert in this King Vidor production of the Laurence Stallings' story.
