She Should Know

Responding to an invitation to see the school principal and talk over the question of her boy's transfer to a school better suited to his sluggish mentality an indignant mother appeared with an unpromising offspring.

"I'm Mrs. Blank," she snapped out in icy tones; "do I look feeble-minded?"

Never pausing for a reply, she continued:

"This is my son Arthur; does he look feeble-minded? They say his brain is three years behind his body. I'm his mother, and he was all born at one time!"

Too Much for Ostrich

The digestion of an ostrich is said to be about as powerful as that of a goat, yet there are some things that an ostrich cannot digest.

This was proved by a recent post mortem examination of one at a zoo. The bird, it was discovered, had swallowed a can opener, and this had caused its death. Among other articles found in the ostrich were two staples, a cent and a zoo attendant's hat badge.

Ledgers, Ledger Sheets, Sentinel.

For the date thereof, and are redeemable at the office of the city recorder of Cottage Grove, Oregon, upon payment of the face value thereof with interest at the date of payment of five hundred dollars ($500.00) each except that one of said bonds shall be of such denomination as will make up the total amount of the bonds authorized to be sold. Said bonds shall bear interest at the rate of six percent per annum, payable semi-annually on the 1st day of July and the 1st day of January of each year, principal and interest payable in gold coin of the United States at the office of the city recorder of Cottage Grove, Oregon. Said bonds will be sold for the highest price obtainable, but not less than par and accrued interest.

Sealed bids will be received for all or any portion of said bonds, the common council reserving the right to reject any and all bids.

A certified check for two (2) percent of the amount bid payable to the city recorder of Cottage Grove, Oregon, will be required to accompany each bid as evidence of good faith and compliance with the terms of bid.

The bonds offered are "Bancroft Improvement Bonds" based upon street and sidewalk improvement as provided by Ordinance No. 897 of Cottage Grove, Oregon.

If no bids are received for the whole amount thereof, so offered for sale at or above par and accrued interest the common council may negotiate and sell the said bonds at not less than par and accrued interest without revoking the same.

Dated the 26th day of January, 1928.

Nothing but Whisky

Could Satisfy Indians

That the Indians of a century ago had a strong distaste for prohibition is indicated by an article that appeared in the North American Review in April, 1827, credited to Gen. Lewis Cass, senator and secretary of state.

At the treaty of Chicago, in 1821, the commissioners ordered that no spirits should be issued to the Indians, and informed them, in their own manner, that the bonga were driven into the barrels. A deputation of the chiefs was sent to remonstrate against this precautionary measure, and at its head was Topinbe, the principal chief of the Pottawatomie tribe, a man upwards of eighty years of age. Every argument was used to convince them that the measure was indispensable; that they were exposed to daily murders, and that while in a state of intoxication they were unable to attend to the business for which they were convened.

All this was useless and the discussion was only terminated by the peremptory refusal of the commissioners to accede to their request.

"Father," said the hoary-headed chief, when he was urged to remain sober and make a good bargain for his people, "Father, we care not for the money, nor the land, nor the goods. We want the whisky!—Detroit News.

Youngster's Odd Idea of Penalty for Lie

A small boy was taken by his mother to an East-end infirmary. She had sent him on a message to a shop with a halfpenny, and on the way he had contrived to swallow it.

The X-ray was turned on, but a prolonged search of Johnny's anatomy disclosed no trace of the missing coin. He was detained for 24 hours to be kept under the nurse's observation.

A few hours afterward, the tactful nurse, finding her patient subdued and sad, said to him: "Well, Johnny, tell me truly, did you swallow the ha'penny?"

Johnny (crying)—No, I spent it. I was frightened I would get a licking!"

"Oh, Johnny! Do you know where little boys go to who tell lies?"

"Yes; to the infirmary."—London Answers.

Breed's Origin in Doubt

A number of theories have been advanced and considerable controversy has at times arisen regarding the source and method of origin of the Great Dane. The name indicates that this dog is native to Denmark, yet it is common knowledge that the breed's more recent development is directly traceable to the efforts of German fanciers. Great Danes have been bred for centuries abroad and records as far back as the Egyptian period prove that a dog of this type was then in existence. It is presumed that the breed descended from such dogs and that possibly the ancestral Great Dane stock spread to Germany, where it crossed with the blood of the Ulmer Dogge, Rottweiler, Metzgerhund, etc. The "Deutsche Dogge" was adopted as the official title for the breed in Germany late in the Nineteenth century and as such it is now known in that country.

Fifty-Fifty

"When girls talk of going 50-50 with their boy friends, it makes me laugh," said one cynical commuter on the midnight local one night this week.

"What they mean is, that once in a while they'll pay their half of the dinner check—but, of course, let the man do the tipping. And they never think of paying the whole check."

"Women have asserted their independence in many ways—but they still like to be dependent on men when it comes to paying the bills."

All of the other commuters in the smoker of the midnight local, where no women are allowed, nodded in agreement.—Philadelphia Record.

Antiquity of Coroners

The office of coroner is a very ancient institution, and for ages was peculiar to the English. The lord chief justice is the chief coroner in the realm. Originally none but knights were permitted to hold the office, but it gradually became sufficient for a man to possess landed property worth £20 per annum to qualify for the post.

Today members of the legal or medical profession generally secure vacant appointments. Coroners in Great Britain are appointed for life.

Masterpiece

The great artist paused; brush and palette poised in the air. "A masterpiece!" he exclaimed.

"But I don't like it one bit," said the beautiful coed. "I'd be ashamed for any of my friends to see it. You'll just have to do it over."

This was the last straw. The old master became enraged. He threw his palette to the floor and shouted: "Leave my studio, young lady! I'll never paint another slicker for you as long as I live!"

Integrity Above All

In my long experience in business life and association with men there are some fundamental things that must not be overlooked. If I were asked to say the most important things that lead to a successful life, I should say that the first of all is integrity. No man can do anything of any great value in life if he does not have the reputation of honor and integrity.—Charles A. Schwab.

Twisted Dials.

A young bride asked her husband to copy off a radio recipe she wanted. He did his best, but got two stations at once, one of which was broadcasting the morning exercises and the other the recipe. This is what he got:

"Hands on hips, place one cup of flour on the shoulders, raise knees and depress toes and mix thoroughly on one-half cup of milk. Repeat six times. Inhale quickly one-half teaspoonful of baking powder, lower the legs and mash two hardboiled eggs in a sieve. Exhale, breathe naturally and sift into a bowl.

"Attention! Lie flat on the floor and roll the white of an egg backward and forward until it comes to a boil. In ten minutes remove from the fire and rub smartly with a rough towel. Breathe naturally, dress in warm flannels and serve with fish soup."
