"The Folks Next Door"

A humorous lecture, filled with wit. A homely philosophy dealing with our attitude toward those with whom we come in contact every day, but know them not. One man, being asked who his neighbors were, said, "I don't know but their children run across my lawn and their dog pulls up my garden." The attitude in this lecture will be—get to know each other better and all our differences will disappear as mist before the sun.
