Left Freak Songbird Guessing as to Class

People who know Mr. Gatti-Casazza, director of the Metropolitan opera, know he has a positive talent for dealing with bores. Here is the newest story they are telling in musical circles about him:

One of his songbirds, a man not a bit lacking in self-assurance, has a voice of peculiar range. He started as a tenor, changed his mind and register and warbled for a while as a baritone and then actually sang as a basso. One day he cornered the busy Mr. Gatti and edged him into an audition chamber at the opera house. First he sang his tenor notes, then his baritone, then rendered a few bars basso profundo. After which he drew himself up and with the most pride demanded:

"Tell me, am I a tenor, a baritone or a basso?"

"No!" roared Gatti, seizing his hat and leaving the room.—New York Sun.

Chilly Forecast

The earth is growing in bulk on account of its meteoric dust that falls on it. It has recently been estimated that 100 tons fall daily over the surface of the globe and that millions of years hence this will have increased the thickness of the earth considerably. This would have a tendency to bring us closer to the sun. But centrifugal force is augmented at the same time in greater proportion and counteracts this tendency; consequently the earth would be swept away from the sun, with the result that its distance from that body would be considerably augmented. This is spoken of as having possibly happened, to some of the larger, outer planets—notably Jupiter in the remote past.

Why Bishop Quit Betting

That he spoke from experience when denouncing betting, was the declaration of Stirling Woolcombe, bishop of Albany, at a meeting in New York, England, recently. "While at Oxford I was lucky and became extremely interested," he said. "My last bet was ten shillings on a five-to-one winner of the Chester cup, yet my friend and I reached the betting room and I bet again, not because we had lost—we had won a considerable sum—but because we were finding out that when betting enters into you it spurs your highest interests. I believe I would have bet my neck to hell if I had gone on with it."

Boston's Evesless Adames

Modesty, lack of self-confidence, was (and is) a fault of Boston in character—just as undue self-consciousness is in manners. The Cabot type—a self-indulgent, but inhabiting the confines of Boston with customs, but no manners," as the great lexicographer defined them—had at least no manners, and that is all right. "How fortunate," said the French philosopher, "is the case of Boston's Adames, that that young lady has no manners! Because, if she had any manners they would be bad." Only indeed, that Boston's Adames have no Eve. Eve is not a Boston type, any more than Astaire—F. and Timson in Scribner's Magazine.

Odd Reason for Delay

Mr. Jones rang the bell at the new doctor's house. Usually he went to his old family doctor, but the new man happened to live nearer and it was an urgent call. The doctor's wife answered the ring. "You wish to see the doctor?" she said. "Couldn't you come to-morrow morning?"

Training Indispensable

Oh, yes, you can browse around and pick up a living without an education, but even a jackass, to be of any use in the world, must be trained. If your only ambition is to live you have already accomplished that and may as well move on.—Houston Post-Dispatch.

Go Hand in Hand

Show me a store with aggressive, optimistic salespeople and I will show you a store with live, interesting, profitable advertising. For somehow the two go hand in hand. The advertising for such a store just naturally reflects the enthusiasm of that store's personnel. It is an up-and-down store, and that is the impression you get from its advertising columns. You like to visit such a store—and you like to read such advertising news. They both breathe personality. And, in such a store, you just know that the windows are bright and orderly, as are the interior displays, too. When point No. 3 is right, it just follows—F. and Timson in Scribner's Magazine.

Garage Floor

A layer of cinders six inches thick makes a very satisfactory floor for the home garage. The cinders should be thoroughly stamped down, a hose being used to wet them down during the operation. The floor absorbs grease, oil and gasoline that may leak out of the mechanism and it is, moreover, practically dustless.
