Today's Work

Every young life that fronts the world is a power, and is here for a purpose. Take stock of yourself and of your possibilities not only for some far-off future, but for the here and now of daily life. No one will ever do much with the years to come who has not learned to do much with the days that are here.

Tramp Unable to See Idea of Wasting Pie

A tramp called at a motion picture studio, begging for something to eat.

"Just the man we need!" cried the director. "You require no make-up. Our tramp failed to show up. Do what you're told and I'll see that you eat."

"Now, when I give the signal, you steal this custard pie from the window-sill, and run around the house. A policeman will chase you and when he is about to catch you, you throw the pie at him."

"Take careful aim, and, if possible, hit him in the face."

At the given signal, the tramp appropriated the pie and disappeared behind the house. In a little while a policeman gave chase and cornered him.

The director shouted: "Throw the pie, throw the pie!" No pie was forthcoming!

The irate director had the camera stopped and then he roared: "Why didn't you throw the pie? Where is it?"

The tramp, wiping his mouth with his coat sleeve, answered: "When I gets my hand on a pie, I eats it."

"You're fired!" thundered the director. "Wrong again, pander," said the tramp, "when I eats, I quits."

English Castle Once Had Merman Prisoner

A curious legend is associated with historic Exford castle, on the Suffolk coast (England) which recently came under the auctioneer's hammer.

Fishermen are said to have captured a merman not far from the castle, and the interesting monster, so runs the legend, was imprisoned in the castle keep, and an attempt was made to tame and humanize him.

The merman, however, was a "difficult" subject, and one dark night, when the efforts to tame him seemed about to be crowned with success, he escaped by some mysterious means from his prison, and was no more seen of man.

The castle is stated to have been built about the twelfth century, and the imposing Norman keep with its three square embattled towers, the Norman pillars, capitals, and altar ruins of the old chapel remain, an ancient staircase still leading to the dungeons.

United States Motto

"E pluribus unum," the Latin phrase that has become our national motto, originally occurred in a poem entitled "Mortem," supplied by some twenty lines and written by Virgil. It literally means, "one from many," or "from many one."

According to the Pathfinder Magazine, the Continental congress on July 4, 1776, appointed Frank Jay, before then Jefferson, a committee to choose a device for the seal of the United States of America, and this committee consulted Eugene Pierre Du Simitiere, a West Indian Frenchman living in Philadelphia, who had some reputation as an artist and he submitted a device containing the above phrase. Usually, however, the motto is attributed to Jefferson.

Building America

America would have been discovered had there been no Columbus; but there could have been no United States had it not been for the tens of thousands of peasants, artisans, merchants, sailors and adventurers—common men and women—who braved the danger of long ocean voyages, cut down the forests, cleared the land, built the towns, drove back the Indians, and pushed the line of peaceful home-coming across the American continent until it touched the Pacific ocean—Charles A. Beard.

Australian Emblems

The Australian flag is a blue ensign, the description of which is as follows: The Union Jack in the top left-hand corner; in the center of the lower canton next the staff and pointing direct to the center of the St. George's cross in the Union Jack, a white seven-pointed star (representing the six states and the territories of the commonwealth); in the fly, five smaller white stars, representing the Southern cross. A red flag, carrying the same markings, is used by the Australian merchant shipping.

Sweden in History

The place names of Sweden, many dating as far back as the Bronze age, and from viking times, are now being specially studied and it is expected that much light will be thrown upon many linguistic and historic problems in other parts of Europe, as the population of Sweden has remained practically homogeneous for thousands of years. The language spoken has always been Swedish, although Swedish literature cannot be said to have existed earlier than the Thirteenth century.

Provides Splendid View

The tenth tunnel railway of Austria, recently opened, leads from Innsbruck Dolomites, the fine mountain range behind the Tyrolean capital. The passenger is taken some 5,500 feet above sea level within an hour. Thence he can walk on to a plateau. The view from there is one of the most beautiful in the Austrian Alps.

Cathedral Dimensions

The length of the cathedral of St. John the Baptist at Cologne, New York—601 feet—is greater than that of Amiens, which is 521 feet long; Cologne, which is 511 feet long; Chartres, which is 507 feet long; and Milan, which is 500 feet.

Noise From Above

People who live in flats and two family houses will sooner or later thank the government for the work its scientists are doing to devise sound-proof walls and floors, says a writer in the Woman's Home Companion.

Novel Menu

When Jackie returned from his first party his mother was eager, of course, to hear all the details of the festivity. When asked what he had to eat, Jackie said "Pink jumbo and thumbs!" His mother, quite mystified, telephoned his hostess, and found that cherry jumbo and lady fingers had been served.

School Attendance Back to Normal. The grades and high school, which had been closed since December 19, resumed school work Wednesday. Attendance in both branches was nearly back to normal. School was closed several days before the scheduled Christmas holidays when attendance was cut by increased absences due to the influenza epidemic. Sixteen were absent from high school the first day school resumed. Today only ten were absent.

Perfection

Henry Ward Beecher said of his Aunt Chandler that "she was a woman so good and so modest that she spent ages in heaven wondering how it happened that she ever got there, and that the angels will always be wondering why she was not there from eternity."

Physiognomy

In the early days physiognomy was considered a form of witchcraft, and persons practicing it were much discredited. In 1597 an English law provided that "all persons having a knowledge of physiognomy should be stripped and openly whipped until the body be blonde."

Raising Snakes

The National Zoological Park says that it is a difficult matter to raise any species of young snakes. Their food should consist of meal worms and earth worms, grasshoppers and such small insects. A pair of milk into which a raw egg has been beaten, should be kept in the cage.

Human Nature

When two start out into the world together, he that is behind, unless he mind prove generous, will be displeased with the other—Collier.
