English Beauty Spot in Heart of Sussex

The perfect English village lies in the heart of Sussex and is called Street. The village has no shops, no public buildings, or even a post office, and gasoline stations are unknown. Street, sometimes known as Street, is aptly named. It has but one street, narrow and winding, with a surface which makes every spring and bolt in a motor car crouch their disapproving noses. The English scenery—hedgerows and orchards, whose trees are laden with rosy apples, and from behind which a misty glow of light comes, is a picture which every day comes a flange of hammer and anvil, a fine old manor house and a village school. Everything is unspoiled.

Simple Fire Extinguishers

There are certain kinds of chemical fire extinguishers which consist of a strong metal cylinder, nearly filled with a solution of baking soda. Held firmly in the top of the cylinder is a bottle of sulphuric acid. There is an opening in the top of the cylinder which is connected with the nozzle by means of a short rubber tube. When the extinguisher is inverted the acid falls out of the bottle and, mingling with the soda, generates carbon dioxide. The pressure of this gas forces the solution mixed with the gas out of the nozzle and smother the fire.

Superior to Misfortune

Blindness did not hinder Milton from composing poems which made him the greatest English poet after Shakespeare. Coming to our times, Darwin himself, author of the "Origin of Species," was a life-long sufferer from indigestion, and Pasteur, greatest of bacteriologists, cent name in modern medicine, did his most significant work after he had been struck down by paralysis. Some of these men are to be numbered among the founders of our modern civilization. Deprived of their efforts, civilization would have been retarded and the world would have suffered incalculable loss.

One of the Ten

School had begun and the first problems adjusting the effects of the summer's vacation were in order on the playground. Miss W. thought she had heard a forbidden word used twice in a little while so she said tactfully: "What was that you said, Jimmy?" That she had evidently not been mistaken was obvious from the earnest reply: "No, Miss W—I wasn't cussing—I never cuss—I always follow the Ten Commandments, and one of them says, 'Thou shalt not cuss.'"

FREIGHT RATE CHANGES DISCUSSED BY C. OF C.

Ed Ostrander of Salem, former state public service commissioner, gave an impartial survey of the Southern Pacific's application for changes in freight rates at a meeting of the chamber of commerce last night. Mr. Ostrander said that the move of the Southern Pacific was to enable the railroad to secure some of the business now going to water carriers by setting rates to meet coastwise competition at Pacific coast ports by water carriers.

Phases of the effect the proposed change might have on inter-mediate points were discussed. The chamber decided to postpone action on the application for equitable freight rates until the Tuesday meeting of the group at which time the information given by Mr. Ostrander will be discussed.

I Used to Think Safeway Was too Good to Last

That's what Mrs. G. confessed the other day. She said she found it hard to believe that it was a business possibility to sell Safeway quality with Safeway service at such consistently reasonable prices. "Of course, when you stop to think that nearly 3,000 stores from the Safeway buying unit," said Mrs. G., "it is easy to see that you can go right to source of production and do away with middlemen and extra handling." Like thousands of other women she has found in Safeway quality, Safeway service and Safeway savings the answer to the problem of how to buy foods most economically and satisfactorily.
