Flower Cultivation

It is not possible to answer definitely as to when wild flowers were domesticated. The ancient Egyptians, Greeks, Assyrians, Romans and Chinese cultivated flowers for use and pleasure and propagated many plants. One of the most ancient examples of cultivated plants is a drawing representing figs found in the Pyramid of Gizh in Egypt. Authors have assigned a date varying between 1,500 and 4,200 years before the Christian era. The first notions concerning gardening were introduced into Japan by the Koreans in 604 A. D. In China, 2700 years B. C., Emperor Chennung instituted a ceremony in which every year five species of useful plants were sown.

Not Guilty

A man was charged with kissing a girl against her will, and during the proceedings the girl went into the box.

"You say," said the counsel for the defense, "that my client took you by surprise, and that you gave him no encouragement?"

"I do," replied the girl.

"Doesn't it strike you as strange that he should have managed to kiss you as you were unwilling?" added counsel. "Look at my client, and then consider your own height. Why, you must be nearly a foot taller than he is."

"Well, what of it?' retorted the girl. "I can stoop, can't I?"

EUGENE BAPTIST GROUP LOCAL CHURCH GUESTS

Forty members of the Hi Baptist Young People's union of the First Baptist church in Eugene were guests of the local B. Y. P. U. Sunday evening at a devotional meeting. Mrs. L. H. Randle, who spent a number of years in China, talked on the life of Chinese young people. The Misses Allen sang a duet, Margaret Leonard gave a speech of welcome and the response was given by the president of the Eugene B. Y. P. U.

The Eugene group remained for church services. At the close of the church service games were played and refreshments were served.

Ancient Writers Had Idea of Punctuation

Our present system of punctuation, which divides written language into sections by means of various signs and points, may be said to have grown out of a system developed by Aldus Manutius, an Italian scholar and printer, who printed Greek classics on his press at Venice in the latter part of the Fifteenth century and the beginning of the Sixteenth. Manutius was born in 1450 and died in 1515.

It should not be supposed, however, that Manutius was the sole inventor of punctuation, although the main features of the modern system are due chiefly to his ingenuity and that of the Greek scholars employed by him. Among the later Greeks various dots had been used for oratorical purposes. Aristophanes, a Greek grammarian of Alexandria who died about 180 or 185 B. C., is said to have devised a system of punctuation by means of dots.

Prose punctuation of a crude type was probably used even before the time of Aristophanes. In the early part of the Ninth century these earlier systems were so completely forgotten that Charlemagne requested scholars to revive them. St. Jerome, who died 420 A. D., knew nothing whatever about punctuation.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Effect of Light on Flowers and Plants

Spring violets have been made to bloom in the summer simply by cutting down their ration of daylight to the length of a spring day. The extra heat of summer had no effect on the growth of the plant.

In this controlling of plant growth, artificial light has the same effect as sunlight or the light of a greenhouse, and twelve hours of light (whether natural or artificial) is "summertime" for the plants, and six hours' light "winter."

An experiment conducted with Iris is given as an example of the effect of light rationing on plants. Two lots of Iris were sown in late October; the first were given eighteen hours of light per day, while the others (kept in the same temperature) received only the light provided by nature. The first lot reached normal size very quickly, and actually bloomed on Christmas day, but the others were dormant as late as the following February.

Queen's Watch

One of the oldest timepieces in the world belonged to Mary Queen of Scots, who felt a superstitious aversion to it and gave it to Mary Seaton, one of her maids of honor, who gave it in turn to Sir Thomas Dick Lauder. It was in the shape of a skull; the forehead was engraved with a scythe and an hourglass between a palace and a cottage, signifying that time and death made no distinctions. At the back of the skull a figure of Time was pictured spreading destruction over the world, and on the top appeared Eve and the serpent in the Garden of Eden, and the Crucifixion.

Just Her Luck

A local business woman had bought a number of chances on an automobile, and on the night it was to be raffled off, went to bed in the firm belief that she was to be the winner. Shortly after midnight the phone rang, and she jumped up to answer it, preparing her "speech of acceptance" as she ran.

In answer to her "hello," the voice said that her niece had twin daughters at the hospital.

"Just my luck," she said. "If it was raining soup, I'd be out with a sieve."—Indianapolis News.

"Lights of New York" Thrilling Production

All-Talking Picture Is Coming to Arcade for Three-Day Showing.

"Lights of New York," Warner Brothers' first full-length all-Vitaphone photoplay, will come to the Arcade Sunday for a run of three days.

"Lights of New York" is unique not only for the reason that for the first time in history all lines of a screen play are spoken by the players—thus doing away with all subtitles—but by the fact that the story which was done by Hugh Herbert and Murray Roth, is one of the most gripping thrill-packed creations ever given to stage or screen.

"Lights of New York" tells the story of two small-town lovers who in quest of adventure and fortune brave the perils of the big town, both getting in wrong. The boy is inveigled into buying a "barber shop" by two New York sharpers, who encourage him to take his mother's saving for the purpose. The shop turns out to be a blind for bootleggers. In a police raid a policeman is shot and the boy is "framed" as the culprit. The girl has secured work in a night club, whose proprietor it is that has killed the cop and put the blame on the country boy, who comes within the shadow of the electric chair.

Brilliant scenes of Broadway, the crowds, the glittering night clubs, the river front, the underworld riffraff, the police—make the story great—and the voices of the players are amazing in their naturalness and contrast. Helene Costello and Cullen Landis head the all-star cast. Others are Gladys Brockwell, Mary Carr, Wheeler Oakman, Eugene Palette, Robert Elliott, Tom Dugan, Tom McGuire, Guy D'Ennery, Walter Percival and Jere Delaney. Bryan Foy directed the picture.
