Love-Making Added to Arts Lost to Mankind

"Love-making is fast becoming a lost art. It is being practiced with about as much enthusiasm as a hungry man pounces upon a charlotte russe; with as much finesse as a butcher carves a steak," says Paul Mirand, author.

"Love, the sublime passion, the most intense, absorbing and tender of all the emotions is in a real danger of dying a slow, reluctant death.

"It is a great tragedy, but we must face it. We have neither the time nor the place for love-making. Love-making requires leisure and an appropriate setting, and in this modern day we have neither. It is true that love—a fundamental passion of mankind—can never be done to death. Men and women will always fall in—and out—of love; but it is regrettable that love, so divine, and love-making, so delightful, should become such negligible quantities in our daily lives.

"Love-making once used to be a great art—one which was conducted with artistry, talent, skill and finesse. Today not only men, but women also, are too busy making money to take time to make love."

Thrifty Music Lovers "Paid" for Their Seats

When Mme. Nellie Melba once was on a tour of Australia, some of the leading citizens in a little town she visited decided there was no reason why they should pay to hear her sing, says an article in London Tit-Bits. And so, dressed in their best, they walked to the hall, then slipped around to the side of the building, where they found a ladder leading up to the roof of the hall.

Up they climbed, and placed themselves around an open skylight, through which they heard the concert perfectly. While it was in progress the caretaker remembered he had left the ladder out, so he put it away in a shed. After the concert the party on the roof discovered that their "exit" had disappeared. There was a 25-foot drop, and none of them, in their Sunday best, cared to risk it. So they were forced to sit on the roof in the biting wind until 4 a. m. when they attracted the attention of a policeman, who rescued them.

Stars Are to Blame

The word influenza has an astronomical origin, according to a writer in London Answers. It perpetuates one of the earliest guesses at the origin of the disease—that of the Italians, who blamed the "influence" of the stars for the Seventeenth century epidemic.

We are still uncertain as to the causes of flu, though we no longer look for them in the stars. The uncertainty is natural enough, so baffling are some of the influenza epidemics. For instance, that of 1889 started simultaneously in Central Asia, Greenland and Northwest Canada—places thousands of miles apart—and then spread all over the world.

Marquis Collects Parrots

The marquis of Tavistock of England has found that society life is not so interesting as he had given up society. He is said to own the world's greatest collection of birds. Collectors in all parts of the world are sending specimens to his great aviaries at Warlington, Hants. Some of the parrots are nearly one hundred years old, and one of the choicest treasures is a Lutino blue-fronted Amazon, which is regarded as a freak of nature. Its body is a rich golden yellow, while it has a white forehead and red and white wings.

First Movies

It is said that the first motion pictures were received in New York with very little enthusiasm. They were presented in 1896 at Koster and Bial's Music hall on Sixth avenue. The audience was apparently under the impression that they were a trick advance of some kind in shadowgraphy, which was then very popular. The first movie audience was even more critical than a modern first night crowd and did not even deign to applaud.

Really Drunken Animals

It is now an established fact that a good deal of drunkenness exists in the animal world, among the chief offenders being the bees. Lombroso has asserted that intoxication was the cause of crime among many animals, and has cited instances of the sheep and goats of Abyssinia, which go out on regular sprees, eating (to them) the lubricating beans of the coffee plant, and thoroughly enjoying the condition they find themselves in!

What Makes Our Friends

It is not seeing one's friends, having them within reach, hearing of and from them, which makes them ours. Many a one has all that, and yet has nothing. It is the believing in them, the depending on them, the assured that they are good and true to the core, and therefore could not but be good and true toward everybody else, ourselves included.—Dinah Mulock Craik.

"Rapid" Mail Service

When a letter traveled from Philadelphia to Berlin 100 years ago in 27 days, it was considered fast time, according to a Philadelphia paper, which said: "Rapid communication by our packets.—A gentleman of our acquaintance in Berlin, Prussia, lately received a letter from this city 30 days after its date and another, 27 days. The letters went to Havre by different packets."

Too Weighty for Autos

The bureau of standards says that automobiles could be successfully run on natural gas, but the gas would have to be compressed into steel cylinders which would add considerable weight. The amount of natural gas equivalent to five gallons of gasoline would require enormous containers if it were not compressed.

National Anthem

Congress has repeatedly refused to take any action toward recognizing a national anthem. Army and navy regulations, however, and a war-time proclamation by President Wilson give that honor to "The Star-Spangled Banner."

Critic's Duty
The aim of criticism is to distinguish what is essential in the work of a writer. It is the light of a critic to praise; but praise is scarcely a part of his duty. What we ask of him is that he should find out for us more than we can find out for ourselves.—Symons.

Wood for Lead Pencils
The forest service says that the red cedar, from which lead pencils are made, grows all through the eastern part of the country. The lead pencils are made from the heart wood, and probably the trees suitable for this purpose are about fifty years old.

Destructive Fires Set by Terror-Ridden Cats
Two stories from Paris tell of two cats, each of whom burned a house down. From Montbelliard, in the east, comes the tale of a cat which, in the absence of its mistress, crawled up on the mantelpiece to reach a chunk of meat that hung above. It lost its footing and fell into the fire. Crazed with fright and pain it streaked out of the window and to its usual haunt, the granary. Its blazing fur set fire to the building, which burned to the ground. The other tale came from Loriet on the west coast. There a cat had been plagued by two small girls who had been left at home alone. The elder of the two snatched a coal from the fireplace and put it on the cat's back. The animal rushed from the room into the adjoining bedroom and leaped into the bedclothes. When the resulting blaze was finally perceived by the girls it had grown to overwhelming proportions. The girls rushed out of the house and the building was burned down.

Dangerous Reptile

Only sleeve-valve action gives such smoothness

Only Master Artistry Creates Such Beauty

IN THE opinion of leading engineers and hundreds of thousands of enthusiastic owners, the patented Knight double sleeve-valve engine is the simplest and most efficient automobile power plant ever designed. In each cylinder, two sliding sleeves combine with the dome-shaped cylinder head to form a tightly sealed combustion chamber. This cylinder head directs the full force of the explosion straight downward against the piston, making the most efficient use of the highly compressed gas. The great turbulence of the gases in the spherical chamber causes a faster burning of the fuel and therefore a more effective explosion and extra power. The Willys-Knight engine gives uniform compression at all times, at all speeds and with any gas.
