Disease Germs Cannot

Live in Mother's Milk

Scientists have known for some time that babies fed on mother's milk were protected in some mysterious fashion from various diseases such as whooping cough, measles, diphtheria and the like. Now it appears that the mother's milk actually has the power of killing disease germs. Dr. Friedrich Schlaeppli, bacteriologist at Berne, Switzerland, has experimented with milk from nursing mothers and found that the milk has this bactericidal power to a very high degree. If the milk is kept at a mean temperature this power may be demonstrated for sixty hours or more. Such bacteria as get into it are at least very much retarded in their development, if not actually killed. The milk is even able to destroy bacteria which do not normally occur in it. Billed milk has not this power. Doctor Schlaeppli has succeeded in filtering milk, obtaining a clear greenish liquid which contained albumin but no fat. The germs naturally contained in the milk stayed back with the fat, but the power to kill bacteria remained in the clear filtrate. This was proved by adding germs to the filtrate, which destroyed them.

When the case came up, the attorney for the defense asked that the action be dismissed on the ground that no harm had been done, that if any offense had been committed both parties were equally at fault and that when all was said and done, it was just a case of puppy love.

"What do you call puppy love?" asked the court.

"Well," replied the attorney, "it's the kind that's too young to have to get a license for."—Los Angeles Times.

Long Bow Deadly Weapon

The long bow, famous in the romantic history of knights and tournaments, was first used in Wales. It was merely a piece of sinewy wood and a stout cord, but it was one of the most deadly weapons of ancient times, for an arrow shot from the long bow could pierce a heavy oak door and the mail-clad knights were powerless before its terrific speed and force. By the long bow the Welsh gained many victories over their enemies, while their principal means of defense were the stout walls of their castles. Day by day the Welsh warriors have written one of the few books dealing with the Welsh people.—Detroit News.

American "Penny Press"

The history of American Journalism states that the precursor of the penny press was the Daily Evening Transcript, established in Boston, by John W. Alden. While this paper was not sold on the streets for one penny, it was quoted at the extremely low rate of $4 per annum. Probably the first daily paper was actually sold for one cent was the Cent of Philadelphia, published in the same year as the Daily Evening Transcript in Boston. In New York City the idea was first conceived by Dr. Horatio David Shepard.

Salt in History

Savage races have lived without salt, but history shows that wherever it has been obtainable even at the cost of much time and money, men have struggled to obtain it. This is probably more because of the zest it gives to foods, than because of its value as a food. The elements found in salt are usually present in sufficient quantities in the diet.

Rigid Tests for Drivers

In Berlin candidates for places as bus drivers must pass a series of very rigid tests. When the applicant has complied with all other requirements he is placed at a steering wheel and confronted with a moving picture screen in which appears a procession of buses and other vehicles, a runaway horse, some old ladies scurrying back and forth and an occasional "jay walker." If the candidate avoids all these obstacles satisfactorily he gets the job.

Tree Beliefs

Many of the first Christian church bells were fastened in tall trees that stood near the church, writes Satis N. Coleman in his book, "Bells." Even today, in some villages of Russia and other countries, the bells hang in the branches of a tall tree in the churchyard. In Iceland the bell usually is placed in the "larch gate," a covered entrance to the graveyard. The tree bellry case was common in Scotland and Ireland.

Duty

An Indiana business man who is a crank, a "dreaded" fellow, his wife by setting his cup of coffee in the platter of butter.

"What do you mean by doing a trick like that?" inquired the wife.

"I am only carrying out an injunction of humanity. It's the duty of the strong to support the weak," replied the aggrieved husband.—Indianapolis Star.

Old-Time Playing Cards

Some authorities believe that the very earliest wood block prints of Europe, perhaps earlier than the Buxheim St. Christopher, were playing cards. The earliest of these which we know are also French, two valets or knaves which are thought to have been made in Provence not later than 1480.—Boston Transcript.

Cause of Snoring

Snoring is usually due to the relaxation of the muscles that close the mouth during sleep. Sometimes, however, it may be due to a disturbance in the nasal passages which may be corrected by proper treatment.

Real Brain Capacity

Not Matter of Weight

Brain capacity does not increase with the ages, as far as, at least, as historic periods go. Sir Arthur Keith, conservator of the museum of the Royal College of Surgeons, was examining a skeleton which had been found in digging the foundations of a house at Purley, Surrey, and he said:

"This man was a Roman, a real Roman. His skull is quite different from the Roman-British skulls of 1,800 years ago. It is a good deal heavier, and just beside it we found the skull of a child that must, in my opinion, have been the image of its father."

He measured it lovingly with a pair of calipers, and made a lightning mental calculation:

"He has more brain capacity than I have. But what I would really like to know is, what did he do with it?"

The skeleton is to be sent to the Croonian museum.—E. N. Kirk, in the Vancouver Province.

King Might Have Had

"To Tell It to Judge"

An amusing story about King Edward for the defense asked that the action be dismissed on the ground that no harm had been done, that if any offense had been committed both parties were equally at fault and that when all was said and done, it was just a case of puppy love.

When the case came up, the attorney for the defense asked that the action be dismissed on the ground that no harm had been done, that if any offense had been committed both parties were equally at fault and that when all was said and done, it was just a case of puppy love.

Vegetables Enjoyed by

Epics of Old Times

The books of ancient Greece were black and white and the leaves as well as the roots were used. The leaves were generally preferred to lettuce, though lettuce was highly thought of for its cooling effect.

There are accounts of lettuce being served in its natural state at the table of Persian kings as far back as 500 B. C. The Romans generally cooked it. Roman lettuce was curly and its excrement was said to induce sleep. In sixteenth century England, where eight varieties were found, it was cooked served with oil and vinegar.

Only in recent years have mushrooms been anything like abundant on the market, and considered a rarity still; yet mushrooms have been available for thousands of years.

Said Pili: The last device of epicures to sharpen their appetites and tempt them to eat inordinately is the cooking of mushrooms.

Often they prepared the dish with their own hands and enjoyed it. The mushrooms, however, fell into discredit at the death of Emperor Tiberius Claudius, on account of the aid it had rendered Agrippina, his wife, in poisoning him.

Made Handsome Income

By "Hurry Up" Weddings

One of the most famous marriage brokers of history was Rev. Alexander Keith, who, about the middle of the eighteenth century, did a flourishing trade in clandestine marriages in the Mayfair district of London. He used to celebrate as many as 6,000 a year and charged a guinea for each ceremony. He was publicly excommunicated and the bishop of London, Judge Andrews, who tried him, and the rector of St. George's.

James, fourth duke of Hamilton, was married to the beautiful Miss Gunning by the Rev. Mr. Mayne, chaplain of the duke's household, with a ring from a curtain at 12:30 a. m. In 1733 the marriage act put an end to Keith's hasty weddings and he retired to private life.

How Poppy Became Symbol

There is some confusion and misunderstanding in regard to the use of the poppy as a symbol, by the American Legion and the Veterans of Foreign Wars. The poppy was first sold in this country for war relief before the armistice, when Mme. Guerin disposed of millions of them which had been made by French women. The Veterans of Foreign Wars bought the last of her stock. In 1920 the American Legion had a national poppy sale, but in 1921 had a daisy sale. The Veterans of Foreign Wars then had a poppy drive. Later the Legion used the poppy. Both organizations now sell poppies near Memorial day for needy veterans, and it seems that this flower has found a place in the American heart along with the red cross upon a white field.

Head Aloft Lives

"In October or November every year," writes Prof. J. Arthur Thomson in "John of London's Weekly," "when the moon enters on its third quarter, for half an hour before sunrise, the long pale moon seems to rise from the crevices among the coral reefs and jerk off their whole body, except the head end, which keeps its hold on the coral cranny. Then the sea seems with its writhing greenish worms. It is like vermin cell soup for several inches deep. The worm bodies wriggle and burst, liberating millions of egg cells and sperm cells. All the bodies die; but the heads live on and grow new bodies for next year, thus avoiding the nemesis of total death. Subtlety at a low level!"

Left-Handedness

After a close study of several sets of identical twins, two eastern scientists have observed that there is an apparent relation between the direction of left-handedness and the direction in which whorls in the hair curve, says Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Weather Changes

The weather bureau says that day-to-day changes in the weather—one cold, next warm, then perhaps cold again—are mainly due to changes in the direction of the wind, and that in turn to changes in the distribution of air over the surface of the earth. The causes operating and their effects are rather complicated, but go back mainly to circulation between the equatorial and polar regions (caused by the heating of the tropical regions) as modified by the effects of the daily rotation of the earth.

Canadian Metropolis

Years before adventurous white men penetrated inland into America, Indians gave the name "Toronto" to the place where trails and water routes converge at a bay of Lake Ontario's northern shore. Toronto means "meeting place" in the Indian language, and thanks to the amazing progress of modern transportation it has grown from a tiny settlement where goods were traded for exchange to one of the largest cities in Canada and a great railway center with a population of nearly 700,000.

Childish Progress

Starting at infancy, a child's community is his mother. After the age of two, other children form his community. At six the real imaginative age of a child is shaped. From then on the child needs guidance at his games at all times. As the child grows to the teen age he forms companions and makes his community. The father has as great a responsibility in making a fine community for the child as the mother has.—Dr. Joseph Lee.

Relief From Curse

Of Constipation

A Battle Creek physician says, "Constipation is responsible for more misery than any other cause."

But immediate relief has been found. A tablet called Rexall O-Lax has been discovered. This tablet attracts water from the system into the lazy dry, constipated bowel, which the water loosens the dry food waste and causes a gentle, thorough, natural movement without forming a habit or even increasing the dose.

Stop suffering from constipation. Chew a Rexall O-Lax tablet at night. Next day bright. Get 25 for 25¢ to day at Kew's for Drugs.
