Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Kem and children Tom and Geraldine spent the week end at Roseburg. They were forced to return by way of Reedport and Drain on account of forest fires on the Roseburg highway. Stages were traveling that route but private cars did so at their own risk and were being routed through Drain. Mr. Kem said the bridge over the Umpqua at Scottsburg is open to travel. Surfacing of the approaches to the bridge is not yet completed. The fire on the Roseburg highway.

Nation's Export Trade
Defiance of Old Saying

American producers have exploded one of the best geographic maxims. They now make millions annually by "carrying coals to Newcastle." Many "coals," in fact, to many "Newcastles."

American merchants are selling all sorts of products to countries for which those same products are famous, says the National Geographic society.

Apple blossom time in Normandy is no hindrance to the sale of thousands of boxes of American apples in France. The United States also sells perfume and raisins to France, the home of flower farms and vineyards; hops and sausage to Germany, home of beer and frankfurters, and fertilizer to Chile, the world's chief source of natural nitrates.

Peru is the original home of quinine. Yet quinine leads the list of American medicinal goods worth $400,000 imported into Peru annually from the United States, a country in which cinchona trees do not grow.

Impossible to Predict
Approach of Tornado

Science has devised no way of predicting when or where a tornado will strike or exactly what path it will travel once it starts. Weather bureau officials recognize certain conditions that are favorable—sultry, "sticky" afternoons following mornings that are oppressive, especially in May and June, with an area of low atmospheric pressure shown on the weather map to the northwest—but the weather bureau makes no prediction of tornadoes. Even when conditions are apparently most favorable tornadoes may not occur at all, and when they do appear there is no certainty in regard to what locality or even what state they will strike. Also, no successful effort has been made to warn cities of the approach of a tornado when it is traveling in their general direction. Wire service is always disrupted by such a storm and radio would be worthless on account of dismemberment of a sending station in the storm path.

Two Rare Birds

Two six-plumed birds of paradise—so rare that living specimens had never before been seen in England—arrived recently at the London zoo from New Guinea. They carry on their heads six long, racket-tipped spines which have earned for the species its popular name. On the breast is a metallic blue shield iridescent with green, bronze and blue. Save for a silver cushion on the forehead they are velvety black, making the turquoise blue iris of the eye very conspicuous. If they act in similar fashion to a closely allied species, the birds will throw out their body plumes like a skirt, expand the breast-shield, erect their head plumes fanwise, and strut about erratically.

Who Built Temple Bar?

It is just about 50 years ago that the last slopes of old Temple bar were taken away from their site, although demolition had begun 18 months before! The stones were numbered and stored in Farnborough road for eight years, when the space they took up being wanted, the city corporation gave them to Sir Henry Meux, who spent several thousand pounds in removing them and re-erecting the gate in his own grounds near Waltham Cross. How many people asks "Looker-On" in the London Daily Chronicle, could say who built Temple bar? It was erected by Wren in 1670, and stood at the City "Bar" for over 200 years.

Chinese Thrifty Buyers

Many and varied are the peculiarities of the Chinese buyer whose trade the American exporter is now so busily courting. That is to say, the little people of China. Of course, the wealthy Chinaman buys like a European or an American, only on a more lavish scale. But the little folk have just as strong notions of spending what they have as anyone. They don't buy packages of cigarettes, a package of chewing gum, a can of peaches, or a box of raisins. They buy one cigarette, one stick of gum, half a peach, or a handful of raisins. Surely Green

A department store executive relates: "We put a green boy in the shoe department yesterday. A lady came in and said she wanted to see 'mister' mules. 'I don't think Mrs. Mule works here,' said the boy. '—Jou of Education."

Canorous Anesthetic

The quantity of chloroform required to anesthetize varies with the individual. Great care has to be exercised in administering chloroform and it must be done by a competent physician, as poisoning sometimes results when too much is given.

Hawaiian Chain

The Hawaiian Islands lie in a 1,500-mile chain diagonally across the Pacific from the tiny Owen Island on the northwest of Hawaii on the southeast, but the islands of the main group are all encompassed in a chain of about 400 miles from Kaula to Hawaii.

Water Angel's Flight

The water angel, a unique member of the thrush family, flies not only through the air but through the water. Its feet are not webbed and adapted for swimming as are those of the duck, and, therefore, it uses its wings as a means of locomotion.
