Odd House Constructed at Behest of "Spirits"

The Palo Alto Chamber of Commerce says: "The Winchester house, this city, was built by Mrs. Winchester, the widow of the famous freemason, who was a spiritualist. She claimed the spirits told her she would not die as long as the sound of hammers was heard in her house, and as a result she kept building and building and changing and when the spirits told her, left off one section half finished and started another. It is estimated that at least $100,000 was spent on the structure, and parts of it have not been explored. The house is some three stories high—that is, it looks to be that—but there may be five in some parts where it built on future sections. There are several wings, and the architectural style is largely that in fashion many years ago—very ornate and ugly. Only the best of material was used in the wood work, and the furnishings, which have now been removed, were truly magnificent. One room, the one in which she communed with her spirit guide, was furnished with hung entirely in black velvet. Others were masterpieces in satin, and there were closets full of the best linens, silks, etc., for the entertainment of her spirit guests. She lived alone with her niece and a nurse and never had visitors. In the house itself there are staircases that lead to nowhere, ending in a blank wall. There are others that break off and end some 4 feet deeper. There are rooms 1 foot wide, and there is a tiny balcony with doors about 4 feet high leading to it. There are other staircases with 2-inch risers. Surrounding this curious house of a dingy color are tall cedars, hedges and a nondescript garden."

Hard for Foreigners to Grasp Chinese Etiquette

Social intercourse in China is so complicated that the traveler from other lands often finds himself baffled completely when he tries to follow its intricacies. Every action, every gesture, every carefully worded phrase la replete with hidden meaning.

For instance, it is wrong to remove your hat when entering a Chinese home. It is an insult equally as bad as it is in this country, one did not remove one's headgear. Again, you should never offer a Chinese your hand to shake. You must shake hands with yourself. On arrival and departure, if you are offered anything to drink, it is a breach of etiquette to touch it before the moment you are about to leave. You will notice that your host will pick a cake or choice biscuit and put it on your plate. In return, you must pick the daintiest morsel from the dish of sweets and place it on his plate. In doing so you pay him the greatest compliment.

Sea Riddle Unanswered

If you were plumb the depths of the sea in the Antarctic and your sounding machine came to a sudden stop at about 1,000 fathoms and as suddenly started again and ran on another 1,000 fathoms or so, what would be your explanation?

Twice this has happened in recent Antarctic exploration and the scientists who were present do not know the answer to it. A good easy answer would be that the sounding weight landed on a whale and then, falling off, resumed its downward journey.

But the trouble with this explanation is that 1,000 fathoms is pretty deep for a surface creature like a whale. Pressures are enormous down there.

Design Long Followed

The ratio 1:1.618, said to be the mathematical basis for beauty, has been used in residential designs for 3,000 years. It was applied in building the pyramids, and is considered the ideal proportion for living rooms, window openings, glass lights in windows and so on. It is used by all designers in determining length in proportion to width.

This number, 1.618, is a puzzle. If you multiply it by itself, the result is 2.618. Multiply this by 1.618 and the result is 4.236. Is it coincidence that this last power of 1.618 is equal to the sum of the two preceding? A series of successful examples of the golden section on this same truth, any one power being equal to the sum of the two preceding.

Tears welled up in the brave little woman's eyes.
