Streets of Old London

Dangerous in Storms

Whatever the terrors of the gale we ought perhaps to congratulate ourselves that life in a city is rather than in a high wind than it was in the past. Perhaps the Seventeenth century was the most dangerous; before that time, when London, for instance, was largely made up of wooden houses with thatched roofs, discomfort may have been very great, but danger was probably less. In the Seventeenth century, discomfort and danger must have been pretty equally matched. Unfortunately, however, the great storm of 1703, but we have his lively account of that "very foul, windy, and rainy morning" of January 24, 1695-6, when "my Lord (Bruncker) and I, the wind being again very furious, so as we durst not go by water, walked to London quite round the bridge; and Lord, what a dirty walk we had, that in the middle many times could not carry our bodies again, but were driven backwards. . . . It was dangerous to walk the streets, the bricks and tiles falling from the houses that the whole streets were covered with them, and whole chimneys, nay, the houses in two or three places blown down. But, above all, the piles on London bridge on both sides were blown away, so that we were fain to stoop very low for fear of blowing off of the bridge."—Manchester Guardian.

Ecuador Offers Much of Interest to Explorer

Ecuador may look small on the map, but to the explorer it is an immensely large country, because of the greatly varied nature of its physical characteristics and the absorbingly interesting things seen on all sides.

Rising from the lowlands of the Pacific it extends back over the Andes and then down into the jungle lands about the headwaters of the Amazon. Many of its ancient tribes still exist, with their tribal customs of hundreds of years ago, such as grotesque painting of the bodies and disfiguring of the faces.

The main industry of the country is grazing, although large quantities of chocolate and smaller quantities of bananas, rice, cotton, cacao and other lowland products are raised. Fairly good qualities of cotton and woolen goods are also manufactured.

Rachel's Busy Life

Rachel Bunker of Nantucket lived and kept well occupied back in an age when large families were the fashion. A resident of the island in looking over some old manuscripts and papers came across a note in which the following vital facts were noted:

"Rachel Bunker was taken ill on the 7th, died on the 9th and was buried on the 11th of the 11th month, 1790, aged 80 years, 7 months, 23 days."

"She had 12 children, 113 grandchildren and 90 great-grandchildren."

"About 70 years of her life was devoted to public service, in which time she assisted in the birth of 24 children. There were 31 pairs of twins in the number."

Rachel assuredly did all that one woman could be expected to do toward adding to the island's population and its fine strain of sturdy seafarers and capable home-makers.—Brookton Enterprise.

Another Matter

On a certain golf course in Scotland a deep stream has to be crossed, once in going out and again on returning.

One morning a player made an excellent shot and lifted his ball well over the dangerous spot.

"Ah!" he said smiling cheerfully at his caddy. "Well over you were buried."

But on his return trip his luck was dead out, and the ball landed in the center of the stream.

"Here, you!" he yelled to the caddy. "Awa' doon there an' get my ba' oot o' yon ill-smelling sewer!"

Two Kinds of "Notes"

"Dear Eric," wrote a young lady to her former fiancé, with sadness—"as you are probably aware, I am to be married to Mr. Bendley during the coming month. I shall, therefore, appreciate it if you will burn all the little notes I sent you, during your act of reciprocity in regard to those you sent me."

"Dear Dorothy," wrote Eric, in reply—"I shall certainly comply with your request at once. And, incidentally, as your new fiancé holds a few 'notes' of mine, I shall deem it a great favor if you will induce him to burn them with the rest!"

Francis Bacon's Tomb

One will look in vain in Westminster abbey for the tomb of one of the greatest, most learned Englishmen. The remains of Francis Bacon, Baron Verulam, lord chancellor of England, philosopher and essayist, lie in a quiet old country church on the outskirts of St. Albans.

Bacon, it is related, caught a fatal chill when stuffing a fowl with snow on a bitter day to see whether cold would preserve the flesh—as at that time, I shall deem it a great favor if you will induce him to burn them with the rest!"

Formation of Frost

Frost may be described as frozen water vapor. When frost forms, the temperature is 32 degrees Fahrenheit or lower at the spot where the frost occurs. The temperature a few feet above the surface of the earth, on still clear mornings, often is several degrees higher than it is at the surface. Hence, frost may occur on the grass and in low places when the temperature on one's porch, for instance, is distinctly above the freezing point.

Auxiliary Plans Easter Egg Hunt.

The American Legion auxiliary, at its meeting Monday night, made plans for an Easter egg hunt for children of the legion auxiliary members to be held the Saturday before Easter. Mrs. Jack Miller is chairman of the committee.

The unit voted to join with the Legion in giving an entertainment for members of the case of "Hello There" on Monday, April 21. Mrs. A. W. Kline was named chairman of the committee.

Plans for the Easter ball to be given April 19 in the armory also were discussed.

Golf Club Schedules Matches.

The Cottage Grove Golf club has scheduled a series of team matches for the next three months. The team which will be selected from the best players of the club is scheduled to play Corvallis Sunday, the place to be decided later. The remainder of the schedule follows: April 27, at Albany; May 11, at Salem; May 26, at Roseburg; June 8, at Corvallis; June 22, at Marshfield. Efforts are being made to schedule a match with Bandon and one with the Ilwaco club of Salem.

March Proves Dry Month.

Rainfall during March was far below normal, according to C. E. Stewart, cooperative weather observer. Precipitation for the month was only 1.5 inches. Eighteen clear days, eight partly cloudy and five cloudy days were recorded.

The maximum temperature was 77 degrees on March 28 and the minimum 23 on March 1. The mean maximum temperature was 58.9, the mean minimum 34.6 and the mean temperature 46.7.

Scouts to Attend Circus.

Thirty boy scouts of troops Nos. 16 and 18 will go to Eugene Friday night to attend a Lane county boy scout achievement show, in McArthur court. A number of local residents are planning to attend and a caravan will form at the city hall at 6:45.

The grand parade will start at 7:15 at the achievement show and will be led by the local scout drum corps. The two troops will enter stunts in the circus which will be given at 8 o'clock.

Both local troops will enter a number of scouts for advancement and merit badges. Fay Stewart of troop No. 16 is up for the rank of Eagle scout, the highest rank in scouting. He was examined in Eugene Wednesday night but has received no word of the result of the examination.

A local court of review was held at the Presbyterian church last night to examine the scouts who are up for advancement and merit badges.

Motor Fees Received.

Lane county has received $47,951.84 as its share of state motor license fees paid up to March 15. On account of the change to a six months' payment the first of the year, this payment was smaller than in former years, but annual fees will be paid July 1, when it is expected that fees will total the largest amount in the history of the license department.
