SOCIETY

Ocumpaugh-Norris.

Miss Velma Etta Norris of this city became the bride of Loraine Ralph Ocumpaugh Saturday evening at a quiet home wedding held at the Ocumpaugh residence at 902 Birch avenue. Rev. Charles P. Johnson, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal church, officiated, using the beautiful ring ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Clinton Ocumpaugh acted as best man and matron of honor. Others present were Mrs. William Norris, mother of the bride, Mrs. Burge, grandmother of the bride, Mrs. M. B. Ocumpaugh, mother of the groom, and little Madeline Ocumpaugh, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clinton Ocumpaugh. The bride and groom will make their home at 902 Birch avenue. Mr. Ocumpaugh is engaged in the grocery business on west Main street.

An interesting subject for discussion before the Delphian society Monday night was "Italian Art to the End of the Great Periods of Painting." Mrs. C. C. Cruson was program leader. Those contributing to the evening study follow: "Lesser Venetian Painters," Mrs. W. J. White; "Branner's Estimate of Correggio," Mrs. Elbert Bede; "Bayliss' Estimate of Correggio," Mrs. S. L. Godard; "Post Renaissance Italian Painting," Mrs. John Kelly; "Whistler's Theory of Painting," Mrs. F. E. Mendenhall. In the study of pictures Mrs. Bede gave Correggio's picture; Mrs. Vinal Randall gave a comparison of the Madonnas; Mrs. Bert Trask spoke on "The Adorations."

Paris Breedlove was pleasantly surprised at his home Tuesday night, when a group of young people responded to the invitation of his mother, Mrs. Herbert Breedlove, to help celebrate his seventeenth birthday anniversary. Games and music furnished entertainment for the occasion and at the close of the evening Mrs. Breedlove served delicious refreshments. Those present were Kathleen Beidler, Madelle Beidler, Dorothy Umphrey, Frances Mackin, Dorothy Stewart, Gladys Sproules, Dalton Ward, Kenneth Ward, Dan Kelly, George Hawley, Howard Jacobsen and Paris Breedlove.

Mr. and Mrs. James Dungan entertained the Bona Tempo club last Thursday night at their home on Third street. Additional guests for the evening were Mr. and Mrs. N. J. Nelson, Mrs. H. A. Hagen, Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Cruson and Miss Harriett Weatherson. Mrs. W. A. Garoutte and Mrs. Cruson received prizes at bridge. At the close of the evening the hostess served dainty refreshments. Baskets of old fashioned flowers were attractive room decorations.

Mrs. Fred Anderson entertained the Elmartes club yesterday with a 1 o'clock luncheon at the Colonial. The meeting had been postponed from the previous day on account of the city celebration. Following the luncheon the club members went to the Anderson home for an afternoon of bridge. Mrs. Ralph Saltsman held high score. For decorations Mrs. Anderson used choice anemonies for a table centerpiece and baskets of spring flowers in her home. The club will meet in two weeks with Mrs. George Matthews.

Mrs. Charles VanDenburg entertained the LaComus club Tuesday with a 1 o'clock luncheon. The afternoon hours were spent in a social manner with needlework. Mrs. Harry Metcalf, a club member who recently returned from California, was welcomed back. The luncheon table and rooms were artistically decorated with combined spring flowers.

Mrs. H. A. Hagen and Mrs. Earl Garoutte entertained Wednesday of last week for Mrs. H. H. Harmes of Portland, house guest of her sister, Mrs. O. E. Woodson. A 1 o'clock luncheon was served at the Colonial and bridge followed at the home of Mrs. Hagen. Two tables were in play and Mrs. Herbert Lombard held high score.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Galdabini, newlyweds, were serenaded Monday night at their home on Adams street. Following the serenade the group were invited into the Galdabini apartment and served ice cream and cake. Mr. and Mrs. Galdabini were presented with a basket of miscellaneous gifts.

The meeting of the Research club scheduled for Tuesday night was postponed until Tuesday, May 27, to avoid conflict with the city's illumination celebration.

The Methodist ladies' aid society will meet Wednesday afternoon in the church parlors. Mrs. Bayard Reed will be chairman of the hostess committee.

The Presbyterian missionary society will meet Wednesday afternoon at the church parlors and Mrs. O. W. Blackmore will be hostess. Mite boxes will be opened.

The Degree of Honor met last night in I. O. O. F. hall. An interesting feature of the evening was a one night attendance contest between sides under the leadership of Mrs. Wilbur Spray and Miss Rita Kelly. Mrs. Spray reported the most members present and was given a beautiful corsage bouquet. In two weeks the lodge will meet for a covered dish supper which will be in charge of Mrs. Ivan Barker and Mrs. Earl Garoutte. At that time Mrs. Travis of Portland, district organizer, will be present.

Members of the school board, the city superintendent and high school principal and their wives were entertained at a 6:30 o'clock dinner Wednesday by a class in home economics at the high school. Dinner was served in the high school dining room and the hostesses were supervised by Miss Merle Bowen, instructor in home economics. The table was attractive with a centerpiece of red roses and place cards with rose designs made by the girls.

The Carnation club held its last meeting of the year Tuesday of last week at the home of Miss Myrtle Hubbell on Third street. The evening was spent with social conversation and needlework. Later the hostess served delicious refreshments.

Mrs. Tunis Van Prooyen entertained with a surprise party Saturday for her husband, honoring him on his birthday anniversary. Twenty-five guests were present and a pleasant social evening was enjoyed. Delicious refreshments were served. The honor guests received many attractive and useful gifts.

The Joker club met Saturday night at the home of Mrs. T. C. Wheeler. The bridge scores of the members were kept for the past year and the losers entertained the winners with a dinner. An evening of bridge followed the dinner.

The Lettermen's club of the high school held a picnic at Blue Mountain Monday evening. A weiner supper was served and the evening was spent about a camp fire. The boys invited their girl friends as guests.

A social evening with refreshments will be held Friday night by Cottage Grove chapter of the Eastern Star. Mrs. George Jacobsen will be chairman of hostess committee.

City Grew as Visioned, but in Wrong Direction

In the early days of San Francisco, when it was a town of but 2,000 inhabitants, Richard Pindell Hammond, father of John Hays Hammond, the eminent mining engineer and capitalist, lived there. In fact, John Hays Hammond was born in the Golden Gate city in 1855. The elder Hammond, himself a surveyor, looked over the magnificent San Francisco bay and foresaw that a great city would rise on its shores. He saw with a surveyor's eye how the land lay. He visioned a great port of the future, mistress of the Pacific coast. So he proceeded to acquire certain holdings of land where he was certain the future city would stand. He surveyed it himself, laying out streets and demarking town lots. It was only a matter of waiting a few years. There in the harbor lay tall ships which had brought out gold-seekers and some which came from strange ports to trade. The day was not far distant when ships from all the world would lie in that harbor, thought Hammond.

Today, three-quarters of a century afterward, that carefully surveyed townsite is a mud flat, still vacant, save for an occasional shack of a fisherman. San Francisco has grown into the proud city Hammond foresaw, but on almost every bit of ground save that he selected as the inevitable site.

Tippling and Riots Put End to Morris Dancing

The Lancashire morris dancers who played up so well for their county in the folk-dancing festival in London would perform under social conditions vastly different from those of a century ago, for what really led to the decay of Lancashire morris dancing was the injudicious "treating" at each stopping place of the rushcart dancers, the brawls between rival teams and their supporters, and the riotous crows assembled by the pageant, says a columnist in the Manchester Guardian.

"As drunk as a morris dancer," was a Lancashire saying. Alex Wilson's picture (1821) of a rushcart and morris dancers in Long Millgate, Manchester, in the midst of a riotous and rascally crowd, explains well enough why the custom was put down, the picture being given extra verisimilitude by the local portraits introduced, including the celebrated Reverend Brooks, bewigged and with stick raised characteristically in wrath.

Really Down and Out

The man who is down is always out—when the bill collector calls.—Lynchburg News.

New Hampshire Citizen Surely Was Primitive

"Primitive!" exclaimed the New Hampshire man. "Primitive! Say, there was a man in our town—died five years ago—that couldn't read nor write. He made up his mind his boys were going to have a schooling, though, and sent the fust one off one day, with an almanac. The boy came home and brought back the almanac, said the teacher told him he'd have to have a primer.

"The old man says 'You go back to that teacher and her that when she's learned ye all there is in this almanac, I'll buy ye a primer.'"

"He was primitive," allowed the visitor.

"Say, one time he went into the store here, and he says to the man: 'See here! I'm tired of buyin' an almanac every year. Can't ye sell me one of these leather-covered almanacs, one that'll last me.'

"Well, the storekeeper knew him and knew he couldn't read. So he sold him a leather-covered Testament.

"'Thar,' Oliver says, 'thar ye be. That's the kind of almanac I've wanted a long time.' And he went off home satisfied."—Boston Globe.

Abundant Proof That Animals Change Color

Though many an animal in the Arctic regions will change its coat to white for the winter months, there are few animals who turn gray, as human beings do, from old age. Animals are, however, susceptible to fright and shock, and this may cause their hair or fur to change to white, just as in the case of human beings. Domestic pets are naturally more susceptible to this than animals who are used to fending for themselves in the wild. The black coat of a dog will sometimes turn practically white if the dog has a fit or falls victim to a very bad bout of distemper. Cats are not immune from shock. Horses' coats often seem to change quite appreciably in color, but this may be only a matter of clipping. A horse that has been turned out for some time and then brought in to be clipped will become a light fawn color after the operation, when before it he seemed a dark chestnut. You wouldn't know he was the same horse!

Old Roman Road in England

The old Fosse way, which is to be reopened in its Warwickshire section, is the early English name for the Roman road that ran from Lincoln to Exeter, writes "Looker On" in the London Daily Chronicle. Practically the whole of the original Roman line is still in use, although in parts it has dwindled to a lane.

From Lincoln its course may be traced through Newark and Leicester to High Cross, where it is intersected by another famous Roman road, Watling street, at a point known as the "center of England." Then it proceeds through Cirencester and Bath to the half-forgotten Roman encampment of Ilchester, though the road itself is here in fine condition. After Ilchester, the Fosse way crosses the hills near Chard into Devonshire and then enters Exeter.

Soldering Aluminum

Contrary to general opinion, soldered joints in aluminum are easily made and are as strong when first made as other metals. They fail, however, without exception a few weeks or even hours after exposure to mild corrosives, because during soldering, the solder dissolves some of the aluminum, forming alloys, generally of tin or zinc. These corrode so readily they even disintegrate in damp air, but where complete protection is afforded, as by painting, immersion in oil, etc., soldering is sometimes very useful. This protection is obviously rather impracticable in the case of utensils.

Tastes Differ

A farmer took his wife to a concert and after listening with apparent joy the pair suddenly became interested in one of the choruses: "All we, like sheep, have gone astray."

First a sharp soprano voice exclaimed: "All we, like sheep"; next a deep voice uttered in a most earnest tone: "All we, like sheep." Then all the singers at once asserted: "All we, like sheep."

"Well, I don't!" exclaimed the farmer to his wife. "I like beef and bacon, but I can't bear mutton."

Matter of Spelling

Joe, although in the fourth grade, had not yet mastered the art of spelling. Recently, while visiting his aunt, he made a tour of her extensive library. Joe paused before several books bearing the inscription: "The Sacred Works of John X." He studied them seriously for a few minutes, then asked abruptly, "Aunt Jane, was this man frightened when he wrote those books?"

"Not that I know of. Why?" she asked, puzzled.

"Well," he answered slowly, "these books say 'The Scared Works of John X.'"

Handy Turpentine

Turpentine is a useful commodity, which is not often found in the kitchen. These are some of its uses: The thinning of paint, cleansing glazed tiles, porcelain baths and sinks. Applied with a stiff brush it will keep the gas cooker clean outside. Removes grease instantly from all surfaces. Mixed with floor polish helps the polish to go twice as far and removes spots from the floors. Mixed with black enamel, it makes a good paint for grates and gas stoves.

Inventor Honored

In the public square at Bardstown, Ky., is a monument to Lieut. John Fitch as the inventor of the steamboat. By a unanimous vote the United States Senate and house approved on February 12, 1926, an appropriation of $15,000 for a suitable monument to Lieutenant Fitch. The memorial was unveiled with impressive ceremonies on May 25, 1927.

Rare Tropical Fruit

Botanically, a monastery is known as a philodendron. The taste is similar to both the pineapple and banana. It is brought from Porto Rico and is probably the rarest fruit on the New York market.

Extra Valuable Share of "Catch" Not Wanted

Fishing activities in the islands of Tuee and Skye are operated on the communal principle, and the catch is equally divided among fishers at the close of the day. This custom is to be found all over the West Highlands; in fact, short of direct marketing, it is the only feasible way in which fishing can be carried on. In some districts an extra share is awarded to the owner of the boat, whether or not he happens to be actually one of the crew engaged on a particular day. In Skye and the neighboring islands this share is called "cuid Chuila." An interesting superstitious idea regarding the casting of the lots at the divide survives in some districts. While the shares are always as near equality as it is possible to make them, it occasionally happens that one particularly good or rare fish gives the share on which it is placed a special value. The superstitious fisherman, however, would rather not have that particular share fall to his lot. The most covetous member of the crew, or one who is doomed to die young, will, according to popular belief, be sure to have his "mark" fall on that share.

Poland Offers Much to Attract the Traveler

Poland to many travelers is a country unknown. Yet to the tourist it offers much in the great variety of scenery, the richness and color of its native peasantry, and the charm and beauty of its myriad churches and ancient ruins. Its art treasures, its architecture, its numerous museums, compare favorably with those of other European countries.

Warsaw, the capital and largest city, has a population of over 1,000,000 persons and a history which dates back to the Thirteenth century. Since that time it has seen many changes and events which have helped to make the history of Europe. During the latter part of the Eighteenth century the city experienced a period of great splendor. It was then one of the largest cities of Europe, and it became the very center of artistic, literary and scientific activity, and had also a brilliant court of life. Gracow, only a few hours' ride from the capital, is really the heart of Poland, although Warsaw is the seat of government.

Blooms of the Desert

Many floral dwellers of the desert are worthy of the highest praise, says Nature Magazine. Among them are several shrubs and trees, which in their seasons, are bewitching bowers of bloom—the palo verde, with its cloud of yellow; the smoke tree, a solid mass of dark-blue; the mesquite, hazy with fringy catkins of yellow-green; the desert willow, charming and attractive in a dress of pink-and-lavender; the scarlet chuparosa, and the white-leaved, yellow-flowered brittle-bush, or golden hills. There are others aplenty—the ocotillo, "candlebush" of the natives, most striking and unique of the Colorado desert flora, and the yuccas, with the Spanish bayonet, glorious in bloom, and the Joshua tree, that grotesque plant creation which the Mojave desert claims as its most distinctive feature, acting as the leading representative.

Coined Living Phrase

"Almighty Dollar" is applied to money as the supposed object of worship in America. The phrase is attributed to Washington Irving, who is supposed to have been the first to use it. It appears twice in his "Creole Village," which was published in England in 1837. Irving write: "In a word, the almighty dollar, that great object of universal devotion throughout our land, seems to have no genuine devotees in these peculiar villages."

Goes Into the Highways

The pastor of a scattered parish near Steyning, England, has discovered the way to obtain a good attendance at his church. Each Sunday before the service the preacher takes his car to regular calling places some distance from the church. Whether the day is stormy or fair, he never fails to gather enough people to fill his church. Every one who attends gets a free ride after the service to the point where he was picked up.

Menu Puzzle

One of the crew of a big liner chanced to pick up a menu card, and, seeing at the top "Table d'hote," turned to his pal and inquired:

"What does this 'ere mean, Joe?"

"Well," said Joe, "it's like this 'ere. Them swells in the salon have some soup, a bit of fish, a bit of this, a bit of that, and a bit of summat else, and call it 'table dottie.' We have 'table dottie,' only we mixes it all together and calls it Irish stew!"—London Answers.

English May Festivals

In England the May festival probably reached its highest development. How thoroughly recognized the custom became in that country is illustrated by the fact that in the reign of Henry VIII the heads of the corporation of London went out into the high grounds of Kent to gather the May with the king and his queen, Catherine of Aragon, coming from their palace of Greenwich and meeting these respected dignitaries on Shooter's hill.

Evil of Avarice

The lust of avarice has so totally seised upon mankind that their wealth seems rather to possess them than they possess their wealth.—Pliny.
