Charm of Intication Used to Fight Witches

While the first of May was a time for merrymaking in some countries in ancient times, it was not altogether so in Ireland. There were too many dancers, too many amors, too many wishes and fairies for a reception to be held in honor of Rev. Duncan P. Cameron and his bride. Fall flowers were room decorations. Dainty refreshments were served.

When the great day arrived—in fact before midnight—each family was well prepared. All the fires had been extinguished, awaiting the great Beltane fires which the kings of Ireland lighted on the mountains, and from which the peasants rekindled their own hearthfires. With the first light of May day the men of the house made a din with the pots and pans and cow bells. The half-starved dogs were let loose and howled about the house. The women lit censers of herbs and waved them here and there, and everyone chanted, "Witch fee, fee from here or it will go ill with thee."—Boston Herald.

Many and Various Tricks Known to Fur Traders

Unlike the American fur trader, the greatest part of which is taken of ordinary furs, Canada's fur harvest—apart from that of the fur ranches—is still gathered at the cost of hardship and life from the great open spaces and thickly wooded forests. And it is here, strictly speaking, that romance is forever lurking around the corner. The first collecting of these skins—when the ambitious trader pushes as far into the wilderness as he dares, for instance—in order to meet the outgoing Indian family, usually develops into a battle of wits and words. And the buyer, in many cases, must get up mighty early in the morning if he hopes to circumvent the breed's cunning and trickery. Many a pale, fifteen dollar marten is transformed into a dark, fifty-dollar skin by the skillful application of a little balsam smoke. More than one black housecat finds its way amongst the hundred dollar fishers, while mink and lynx skins having damaged flanks and shoulders are conveniently turned with the fur inside and the leather side out.

Unique Church Used by Benedictines as Shrine

When one thinks of a famous church one naturally thinks of one great in age, great in architecture or great in its historic associations. One finds none of these characteristics in the little church on the Kentucky side of the Ohio river, and so, perhaps, one can hardly refer to it in the same manner one refers to Westminster, Cologne, Notre Dame or Santa Sophia. It is not yet a famous church, but it is at least unique, for it is the smallest church in the world, capable of accommodating but three or four worshippers, says the Cincinnati Enquirer. The small brick structure was built in 1800 by some brothers of the Benedictine order, who used it as a shrine during the years they were engaged there in the making of sacramental wine. During the years of its use it contained an altar, the usual church candles, a crucifix and pews for the accommodation of three persons. But it is no longer used as a church, though still owned by St. Joseph's convent of Covington. The interesting structure, the smallest church in the world, is on the Highland pike two miles south of Covington.

Language Changes Made Over "Precise" Protests

Until about the middle of the Nineteenth century it was usual in pronouncing the word humble to refrain from sounding the h. Generally the word was preceded by an instead of by a. The changing to sounding the h came gradually as a matter of usage, as many changes in the language come. In the end usage must be followed, though precise speakers resist it for a time. Even in fairly recent years a few persons persisted in pronouncing humble without the h. The variation you have observed on this point between an early and a later edition of Webster's dictionary is accounted for by acceptance of the change by the later editors. The gradual adoption of usage concerning the word humble was a subject of protest as long ago as 1833, when a correspondent of the periodical Notes and Queries illustrated his contention that the h should be silent by giving a list of what he stated to be the derivations of the words in which the h should be silent. The words were, heir, honest, honor, hour, humble and humor.

Of Course Henry Had Sent That Letter, but—

He kicked off his wet shoes, slid his tired feet into a pair of carpet slippers, lit his pipe, sat down in the easy chair with a sigh of relief, and declared that 20,000 wild horses couldn't make him stir from the house until the following morning. "Henry," said his wife, "you posted that letter I gave you this morning. I suppose?" "I did, my love," he answered, unblushingly. "I asked mother to postpone her visit for a while," his wife continued. "You see—"

Spanish Homes

Of all the Mediterranean styles of architecture in use today, there is probably none more popular or better known, especially for residential purposes, than the Spanish with its life and color. The Spanish, having apparently been a home-loving race, developed their residential architecture to a higher degree than any other type of building. When the Greek manterpieces are found in religious buildings, as is the case in most historical styles, the Spanish seem to have studied architecture from a livable point of view. Their principal contribution being, perhaps, the Spanish house, which was designed for its owner's comfort in every way possible.

Stone Newspapers

News of the form of large stone tablets has been discovered during excavations at Ostia, in Italy. One is said to record the death of Pompey in 49 B. C., and the will of Julius Caesar with his bequests to the people of Rome. Because of his dispatches from the war in Gaul, Caesar is often called the father of journalism, but it seems that Cicero, born in 106 B. C., has a greater claim to his distinction. Cicero used to post in the galleries of his villa at Tusculum a record of journal of the passing events of note, with a list of births, deaths and marriages. From a letter of Cicero's it is known that he used a system of abbreviated writing.

"Old Nick" in Ireland

Because Ireland is the island of the saints, the Irish are not afraid of the devil, though he has left his mark in many parts of the Emerald Isle. In beautiful Wicklow is the Devil's Glen, cut out by the angry slaying of Old Nick's tail when he failed to lure a fair maiden from her convent. In Tipperary is the Devil's Bit—a huge bite taken out the mountain range and spat down to the plain below, where it still stands as the Rock of Cashel. Then, of course, in Killarney is the Devil's Punch Bowl—but all it contains in these days is pure water.

Ancient Counterfeiters

Money forging was a flourishing business among the ancient Romans, judging from finds at Treves, Prussia, of tools and matrices for the coining of denarii. Excavations brought to light a great many matrices and castings made of bronze which were used in manufacture these silver coins. Proof that these implements, dating back to between 290 and 300 A. D., were tools of money forgers, is established by the fact that there was then no official mint at Treves.

Bible and the Ballot Box

An amusing election incident is reported from Gablonz, in Czechoslovakia there is compulsory voting. The drawback is that it deprives citizens of the opportunity of expressing by abstention their indifference to the candidates. One voter, however, wrote across his paper: "Israhil xli, 24." The authorities consulted a Bible and read: "Behold, ye are of nothing, and your work of nought; is an abomination is he that chooses you."

British Coat of Arms

The lion and unicorn used in the British coat of arms were introduced by James the First. The lion is common in the heraldry of England, and the unicorn has long been a favorite supporter in Scottish heraldry.

Lasting Memory

I feel that there is no such thing as ultimate forgetting; traces once impressed upon the memory are indelible.—De Quincey.

Paraguay Lace Center

The Pan-American Union says that Paraguay is the only country in South America that manufactures lace in fairly large quantities.

Comparisons

Endurance is nobler than strength, and patience than beauty.—Ruskin.

Tell Your Guests With Pride That The Butter and Ice Cream You Are Serving Was Made in Cottage Grove

It should be a source of considerable pride to you, when guests remark upon the quality of butter or ice cream you are serving to be able to say that it is the product of your home creamery. If you are community minded, you will always take pride in telling of the qualities of anything that is made in Cottage Grove.

In the case of butter and ice cream your use of butter and ice cream made in your home town means better prices for cream produced by owners of dairy cattle. Your use of butter and ice cream made in your home town means more dairy cows for your home community. And there is no surer source of prosperity for any community than the cream check. We pay out many thousands of dollars annually for cream that is produced in Cottage Grove, but if every pound of creamery butter and every dish of ice cream that is eaten in Cottage Grove were produced in Cottage Grove we could add more thousands of dollars to the amount we pay for cream produced at home.

When you buy butter and ice cream made in Cottage Grove you get just as good an article as you would if you bought butter and ice cream made elsewhere, and at the same time you have a chance to get your money back.
