Iceland Sagas Credited to Gaelic Influences

The Icelandic sagas are the finest of their kind, possessing qualities which are singularly lacking in the native poetry. The explanation offered by the authorities on these matters is that the sagas of Iceland are only native in so far as they are produced by the settlers, otherwise that they are not Icelandic but the poetry of the western make the emigrant stream into the country.

Unfortunately, both the authors and the dates of composition of the sagas have been lost, but the resemblance between the compositions and those of Ireland is so strong that it leaves little doubt that the Gaelic influences were largely responsible for their production.

There are quite distinct traces of the Celtic mythology, language and manners. The careers of the earlier generations of the Icelandic poets closely corresponded to those of the old Irish bards. Usually men of good birth, and with Irish blood invariably on at least one side, they attached themselves to the bards, living in their courts, sharing their victories and hymning their deaths, ever ready to answer criticism with satire, or if necessary, sword thrust—Montreal Family Herald.

Literal Following of His Physician's Advice

Tsang Gi, an undersecretary at the Chinese legation in Washington, thought he was making excellent progress in English until the day he had to send for a physician, following which he dashed into a Pennsylvania avenue department store.

"I have desire for one of those," he announced, pointing to one of those three-paneled mirrors, ladies use to look at their front and back hair at the same time. "I didn't know you Chinese were so vain," smiled the young lady who wrapped it up.

"Ah," sighed Tsang Gi, "but it is not vain. You observe, I have a boil on the back of my neck, and the great physician whom I summoned advised me to keep my eye on it."

Effects of Malnutrition

Malnutrition is a condition of undernourishment or underweight. Children with malnutrition do not all behave the same way. Some are pale, dull and listless, with dark rings under the eyes, tire easily and have no ambition for work or play. Their work in school is often so poor that they must frequently repeat their grades. Others are nervous and fretful, hard to please and hard to manage. They eat and sleep irregularly. Still others are overambitious, constantly active, restless. They find it difficult to concentrate. Children get into a condition of malnutrition because their growth is not watched. To grow in height and gain regularly, weight is just as much a sign of health in a boy or girl of nine or ten as in a baby.

"Castles in Spain"

The idiom "castles in Spain," current in England in the Fifteenth century, continued in use until 1558 or thereabouts, but with the accession of Queen Elizabeth, and the public sentiment in England being anti-Spanish, it was thrown into the discard. However, the phrase "castles in the air" were used as substitutes. Because of Spain's tyranny and cruelty in Holland and her attempted attack on England by means of the Armada of 1588, the feeling against Spain was so strong that this phrase was not used again in English literature until about 200 years later, but since about 1850 it has been re-established in England.

"Walking Stick" Is Insect

About the length of a finger, and looking more like a dull brown dead twig than anything else, is the "walking stick," an insect which uses its resemblance to a bit of wood as a camouflage. The insect, described by Raymond I. Ditmars, curator of the New York Zoological gardens, in Boys' Life, its habitat is the oak. Its body barely a quarter inch in diameter and of the same thickness from end to end to match the outlines of a twig. The legs are long, like slender stems. If it lay before you motionless, you would never guess that it was a living creature instead of a twig.

Falls Stopped by Ice

There is no record of the Canadian falls at Niagara ever being completely frozen over so that no water fell, but the American falls have been stopped by ice several times. According to the United States geological survey these dates were: February 29, 1848; March 22, 1903; February 14, 15 and 16, 1906; April 27, 1912, and January 29, 1926. The flow over the American falls is only 5 per cent of the total flow of the Niagara river, and freezes over more rapidly than the flow over the Canadian falls.

"Respectfully Yours"

That fine old custom of saying grace before and after meals leads Emilio H. Ries in her fascinating book "Mother Wit" to recall the ingenuity of the traveling salesman who as the dinner guest at a buyer's home, was asked to say grace. Being unaccustomed to the practice of this ceremony, he could do his best.

"Dear Lord," he began, "we are in receipt of your kind favors of recent date and beg to thank you. We hope to merit your future kindnesses."—Kansas City Times.

Historic "Gateway"

The Khyber pass is the most important of the passes which lead from Afghanistan into India. No other pass in the world has possessed such strategic importance or retains so many historic associations as this gateway to the plains of India.

Overlooked

The deepest quarry in the world, says an item, is in the marble region in Vermont. Strangely enough, no golf architect has built a green on the other side.—Detroit News.

Some natives of Isabel Island in the Pacific live in trees, among the branches of which rude huts are built.

Hiking Club Elects

The Bohemians, a newly organized outdoor club, unanimously elected the following officers on their first hike Sunday to the bat caves on the old Divide highway: President, Miss Belle Burkholder; vice president, Ray Nelson; chairman of local walks committee, Mrs. Mabel Dixon; secretary, Miss Bertha Howe; treasurer, Mrs. Ray Nelson; chairman of membership committee, Miss Naomi Wynne; assistant, Miss Margaret Wilson. Charter members of the club are Mr. and Mrs. Ray Nelson, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Murphy, Mrs. Mabel Dixon, Miss Bertha Howe, Naomi Wynne, Margaret Wilson and Belle Burkholder.

It is planned to hold one short hike and one all-day hike each month. The first afternoon hike, to be held Sunday, will be along the south Loran road. The group will start from the home of the leader, Mrs. Dixon. It is also planned to hold one social meeting a month. The first October party was held last night at the home of Miss Belle Burkholder. After a guessing contest to determine the identity of the masked and costumed guests, those present were led by dark and devious ways to the slant entrance of the Grove links, where a game of indoor golf was played and cider and doughnuts were served.
