LUMBER TRADE SEES DIM DISTANT LIGHT OF ENCOURAGEMENT

Chambers & Son Contemplate Extension of Mills to Siuslaw Valley.

Rumor Has It That Anderson & Middleton Are Returning to Field.

That those connected with the lumbering industry believe they see a faint light ahead is indicated by developments of the past week.

Chief among these was the admission by J. H. Chambers & Son that they contemplate a five-mile extension into the Loran valley during the coming summer. The survey was completed some time ago and building of the line has awaited developments in the lumber market. Chambers & Son have plenty of timber for their needs for some time to come, so the extension would for the present serve largely as an outlet for the Siuslaw country. The terminal would be about five miles south of Siuslaw falls. Several persons or organizations with capital have indicated their intention to establish industries on the line. It is generally believed that one of these is the Bohemia Lumber company, which is running short of timber at its present location.

The extension of the Chambers line would cross the survey of the proposed Oregon Electric extension from Eugene, but whether a physical connection with that line would be made is not known. Although Oregon Electric and Southern Pacific officials have held several conferences with Mr. Chambers during recent months, no working arrangement or other agreement has been made.

There is a large body of timber in the Siuslaw country in which there have been no major operations. Alternate sections are owned by the government and the private. The Chambers line is already over the mountain, with all heavy construction completed, and the extension would follow a water grade down into the valley, with construction costs greatly reduced over those of the portion of the line already in operation.

Chambers Mill to Start. The Chambers & Son mill will go into operation during the coming week and 100 men will be added to the payroll. It is understood that a reduced wage has been found necessary because of the disorganizing condition of the lumber market, but the operation is intended to be permanent unless there are further slumps in the market. This plant has been idle since last summer except for intermittent operations to fill in stock. Logging crews were sent out last week.

A. M. May Operates. Word has reached here that the Anderson & Middleton operations may be resumed. This organization went into the hands of receivers during the past year and has not operated for three years. Its Latham mill was destroyed by fire several months ago, but there is the second mill in the city which has not been operated for probably four years. Rumor has it that the mill would be used to get out timbers for a mill of probably 250,000 capacity to be erected at Bedrock, where the company built a huge dam several years ago in contemplation of a construction program. It is said that trouble among stockholders that brought about the cessation of operations here, and later the receivership, have been practically ironed out and that the Anderson & Middleton interests, being practically cut out on Grays Harbor, are ready to transfer their operations to this section. The company spent a huge sum of money extending a railway into government timber at Rutledge, and at the same time have large holdings of timber of its own.

New Mill Is Ready. The new plant of the Cottage Grove Lumber company, owned by George Jacobson and E. R. Lemley, with a 30,000 capacity, is ready for operations. A contract for logs has been let to C. J. Cameron, who recently purchased the timber on the city's west side northeast of the city, is all electrically operated.

District Superintendent Coming. Dr. J. E. Bates, district superintendent of the Nazarene church, will arrive here Wednesday and will conduct meetings for four nights in the local church.

Orders for 300 Cars Of Lumber Being Placed Here

The Standard Seasoning society of this city is making plans to place orders for 300 cars of tight knot fir to be delivered within the next four months. This society announced in November that it would place orders from 200 carloads. Since that time it has taken 217 carloads, largely the product of small mills of this section.

The mammoth dual plant here, with a capacity of 25,000,000 feet annually, is sold out until the latter part of the summer and its sales have doubled during the depression in the lumber market. The product goes largely for bridge building in Iowa, Nebraska, Minnesota and the Dakotas. Because of its much greater tensile strength, its greater resistance to wear and decay, cold seasoned lumber finds a ready market for bridge and structural work of every kind and is making a successful attack on substitutes.

EDITORS ARE VISITORS AT SEASONING PLANT

Southern Oregon Newspapermen Spend Day Here Discussing Problems.

Publishers of southern Oregon, including the coast county of Coos, met here Saturday in a regional meeting to discuss trade problems. A feature of the session was a two-hour visit to the mammoth plant of the Standard Seasoning society. Robert Z. Drake, owner of the business, came here from Omaha for the purpose of meeting the editors, personally conducting them through the plant and describing the art to them. At a banquet in the evening Mr. Drake described his plans for extending the business to other southern Oregon communities. He said that cold seasoning is certain to bring prosperity to tight-knot fir sections, and expressed the regret that his span of life may not be long enough to see the fruition of his plans and told the editors that they could be of considerable assistance by making their communities aware of what cold seasoning is doing and can do in creating a continuing market for fir timber. Public bodies in the central states have actually increased the quantities of lumber they have used since the introduction of the cold seasoned product and the mammoth local plant is sold out until past the coming summer.

At a noon luncheon Frank Jenkins discussed the subject, "Quality Advertising," which was followed by a round table discussion. The next meeting of the editors will be held at Grants Pass in May, when a proposal to form a recreational park of southern Oregon will be discussed.

With permission of battery E, the contractors, Stevens, Niblock & Leabo, gave the editors the use of a room in the new armory and extended other courtesies to the guests. This was the first use of the building had.

This was the first meeting of editors ever held in Cottage Grove.

Special Edition to Go To Central States

Arrangements have been completed for the issuance by The Sentinel of a special edition in the interests of the Rive-let Fruit company, which will be sent to 50,000 of the customers of the company in the Dakotas, Montana and Minnesota.

The issue will be on book paper and will be replete with color showing the fruit resources of the state. A page will be devoted to the Rive-let Fruit company, and a page to the Eugene Fruit Growers. A part of a page will be devoted to Cottage Grove and the Standard Seasoning society.

The Rive-let Fruit company had its inception here and the first plant of the Standard Seasoning society, yet the only one in the world, is located here. It is because of these two facts that The Sentinel was selected for the special edition. The issue will be mailed in May.

Southern Pacific Cuts State Passenger Fares

Marking one of the most striking general reductions in passenger fares made by any railroad serving the Pacific northwest since the war, Southern Pacific has announced cuts ranging from 15 to 20 per cent on its one-way and roundtrip fares between Portland, Willamette valley points and southern Oregon.

The new rates will become effective March 15 and will apply from all stations Portland to Eugene, inclusive, to Southern Oregon points via the Siskiyou line and from Ashland to and including Creswell to Eugene and all points north.

"Southern Pacific is determined to regain the local passenger business it has lost to the highways during the past few years," J. A. Ormandy, passenger traffic manager, said in making the announcement. "The pronounced success which has attended our 'Dollar Day' and other special sales events leads us to believe people generally prefer to travel by train, and these new fares are intended to stimulate that trend. We are putting on these reduced rates for a six-month experiment."

Plant Building Nearly Done.

As soon as the plant is completed installation of vaporization equipment will start and it is believed that a date for starting gas service can soon be named. The gas corporation is sponsoring a heater sale for next month.

Royal Portables, The Sentinel.

"I told the man," said MRS. MOLLA PROPP, "to take the spark gap out of the intake."

WHEN I get into a mystery story, I am just too absorbed, my dear. Yesterday I saw one in the library and started reading it.

I was just at the point where they were chasing the Masked Horror through a dark cave, when the clock struck five and I had to hurry home to make our dinner.

There was the book lying alongside of me in the seat, open at the place I got to when I had to run home. I just couldn't wait and one eye sort of wandered down the page while I tried to watch the road with the other.

All at once I felt a jar, and there was a car ahead of me with a broken rear light and the driver waved his arms and said it was my fault and that I had probably also broken his wheel-hub, but when I told him how sorry I was he let it go at that, although goodness knows he

Polly Shemie, Prized Parrot, Is Dead

Polly Shemie is dead. She died suddenly Friday, although apparently in good health up to that time.

Polly Shemie was only a parrot, but she had been a member of the Wiggins family for over 25 years and was interred with honors due her.

Polly was born in old Mexico, was a Mexican red head and was only three months of age when she came into the Wiggins family. At time of death she was owned by Miss Jennie Wiggins.

Polly was kind and affectionate and would warm the family of danger by giving a shrill whistle or a hearty laugh. No watchdog was needed in the Wiggins home.

And she watched over young nephews and nieces as they grew to manhood and womanhood, a number of them having been born after Polly. They miss her as a member of the family.

Walker High School May Send Its Pupils Here

That union high school No. 6 at Walker may suspend activities and send its pupils to Cottage Grove high school soon was indicated Monday by C. H. Haight, clerk of the district, who visited at the county school superintendent's office.

He discussed with E. J. Moore, county school superintendent, the procedure for such action. Before the suspension can be effected, residents of the district must vote on the proposal. It is understood that a special election may be called for that purpose. The suspension would be for a period of one year.

There are now 16 pupils in the school, nine boys and seven girls. The building is a wooden structure with three rooms.

Action of the legislature in reducing the per capita to small schools may have influenced the proposed action of the Walker district. The new law will not affect the present term of school.

Ripe Wild Strawberries Are Reported

LATHAM, March 10.—(Special.)—First ripe wild strawberries, indubitable proof that spring has arrived in this favored section of the famous, fertile, fruitful Willamette, were reported Monday by Mary McKibben, student at the Latham school, who discovered them while on her way to school.

While spring has seemed late in arriving, the open weather of the past winter probably was conducive to early blooming and growth of wild flora. Wild flowers in bloom were reported from the Lathams section some time ago.

Early Marketing Lambs Is Advocated by Experts

Early marketing of lambs may mean a difference of 50 per cent in the price received, H. A. Lindgren, extension field man for Oregon State Agricultural college, told growers attending special sheep meetings held Monday and Tuesday in the Cottage Grove and Springfield districts.

Eighty growers attended the meetings which were arranged by O. S. Fletcher, county agricultural agent, who spoke on the use of pasturage and forage crops in raising lambs. Dr. J. N. Shaw of the college staff spoke on controlling sheep diseases and parasites. The Cottage Grove group met Monday on the Alfred White farm and the Springfield group on Tuesday on the Deiby Stevens farm.

Extra feeding will enable Lane growers to get their lambs on the market with their baby fat by the middle of July, thus coming in at a time when supplies from other growing regions are normally low. Mr. Lindgren stated.

IMPROVEMENT IS SEEN FOR LUMBER MARKET

Holding Output at Present Level Will Bring About Upward Trend in Prices.

(Crew's Lumber Digest.)

Each week sees the general outlook, not only for lumber but for business of all kinds, growing brighter. All through the country thousands of men are being placed to work and payrolls are coming back to normal at a rapid stride.

While most business men disapprove of the soldiers' bonus loan plan, it will throw into circulation a very large amount of money all over the United States. While it is not an improvement to any large degree, it will be beneficial at least temporarily. That opinion is shared by many and the psychological effect alone will help.

The activity in steel continues to increase slowly and building contracts, particularly for residential structures, have recently begun to show an improvement. Another surprising feature is the reports being received from retail yards in the small towns and agricultural districts, where some had thought there would be no business for many months. There is a noticeable improvement in inquiry, indicating that where the retailers have reduced their prices in proportion to the lower wholesale costs, prospective builders have come to the conclusion that it is an opportune time to buy building material.

The demand for good securities continues to give the stock market a conservative but steady upward turn. A study of past depressions and recoveries that have followed shows that in every instance an improvement in the stock market has preceded a return to normalcy.

One of the most gratifying signs is the increasing demand for new automobiles, which has already exceeded the most optimistic forecasts of the industry. This is thought to indicate in a substantial way growing confidence in the future on the part of the public. Automobile shows now being held all over the United States are making a far greater show than those of similar exhibitions a year ago.

While it may appear far-fetched to attempt to forecast what is in store for the lumber manufacturers by making reference to other industries, nevertheless this is the only way that any idea can be gained at present on account of the extreme depth to which the slump carried the producers of timber products. It has to be admitted that while lumber is of vast importance to the comfort and progress of the country, there are few instances recorded where anyone has ever lost his life on account of the lack of a 2x4 unless it was for some unusual and out of the ordinary requirement. In other words, when people are suffering as many have during the past winter for the want of food and clothing those needs will be supplied first before they give any thought to building homes or making other improvements. There must be a demand for lumber products at prices that will bring the farmer a fair return and there must be a demand for the manufactured products of the thickly populated industrial sections of the east so that there will be payrolls and money put in circulation. The first signs of this very thing have begun to appear and it is not improbable that the improvement will gain momentum once it gets under way.

Lumbermen, from the standpoint of stocks on hand, are not in a bad position and if they will continue to hold their own, they are in a position level until the middle of April there is good reason to believe that the lumber industry will by that time be feeling directly the upward turn of business.
