SOCIETY

Miss Opal Wagner and Mrs. Claude Sherman entertained with a dinner Wednesday night at the home of Mrs. Sherman. Miss Wagner had won a complete oven baked dinner Tuesday night at the cooking school of the Natural Gas Corporation of Oregon and this was the menu served Wednesday night. Covers were laid for Mrs. S. A. Walkinsaw, Eugene, Clarence Chestnut, Margaret Heck, Ralph Chestnut, Evelyn Grove, Mr. and Mrs. Claude Sherman and Opal Wagner. The table was centered with a bouquet of pink carnations flanked by tall pink tapers. An evening of cards and music followed the dinner.

Mrs. R. B. Reed was hostess Thursday afternoon of last week for the Ad Libitum club, inviting as additional guests, Mrs. Cloyce Joerg of Portland, house guest of her sister, Mrs. E. A. Reed, Dan Rente of California, Mrs. J. H. Chambers and Mrs. James Howard. A shower was given for Mrs. Dwight Mercer. A pleasant social afternoon was enjoyed and at the tea hour a delicious two-course luncheon was served. Roses and sweetpeas were attractive room and table decorations. Mrs. Reed was assisted in entertaining by her small niece, Miss Agnes McNew.

The following were elected to office for the coming year at the meeting of the Constellation club Thursday of last week: Mrs. W. E. Lebow, president; Mrs. H. B. Griggs, vice-president; Mrs. George Jacobsen, secretary-treasurer. A report of the year's activities was given by Mrs. E. W. Armstrong, retiring secretary. Mrs. Vinal Randall, retiring president, was presented with a beautiful vase in appreciation for her services. At the tea hour the guests were served by the hostess committee, Mrs. H. A. Miller, Mrs. A. A. Richmond and Mrs. R. H. Fields. The next meeting will be the annual picnic and the club will disband for the summer.

Mrs. A. W. Kime, Miss Myrtle Kem and Miss Florence Jenks entertained Tuesday night at the Kime home, honoring Miss Wanda Isbell, bride-elect of E. Dale Wyatt, with a shower. Out-of-town guests were Mrs. Lee L. Gilbert of Oakland, Cal., and Mrs. E. E. Wyatt and Mrs. Robinson of Eugene. Five tables of bridge were in play and Mrs. W. W. McFarland held high score. Mrs. Wyatt entertained with several vocal selections. Mrs. Robinson played her accompaniments. At a late hour dainty refreshments were served. Pink carnations and snapdragons were colorful room and table decorations.

The teachers of the city schools entertained with a dinner at the Colonial Monday night. Members of the school board and their wives were invited guests. Sweetpeas and babybreath formed attractive centerpieces for the tables and dainty handpainted place cards, made by pupils of Miss Haman's grade, marked the places. An impromptu program, under the supervision of Miss Violet Mills, music director, was presented. Roy Leonard and Charles Beldier, school board members, and Worth Harvey, school clerk, spoke briefly. Old songs were sung by the group.

The retiring officers of the Tuesday Evening club, Miss Mariette Hamant, president, Mrs. C. E. Humphrey, vice president, and Mrs. George Matthews, secretary-treasurer, entertained the members with a 6:30 dinner Tuesday night at the Matthews home. Spring flowers of varied hues were colorful room and table decorations. Annual election of officers resulted as follows: Mrs. Bert Trask, president; Mrs. William Hamant, vice president; Mrs. D. R. Hamant, secretary-treasurer. The evening was spent playing games planned by the retiring president.

The Girls' league of the high school entertained at tea Friday afternoon for their mothers and faculty women. Miss Melba Cochran, president of the league, and Miss Sara Louise Shields, advisor, assisted by groups of the girls, received the guests in the sewing room of the high school. The girls presided at the tea table between the hours of 3:30 and 5. Mixed flowers in artistic arrangement made the room especially attractive. A program of piano and vocal solos and feature dances was given during the afternoon.

The Book and Basket club gave a mothers' and daughters' banquet at 7 o'clock Wednesday night at the Methodist church parlors. Mrs. Ira Aldrich sang a solo. Miss Helen Aldrich was toastmistress. Miss Genevieve Meranda gave a toast to the mothers and Mrs. Charles Shanda responded with a toast to the daughters. The board of officers, Helen Aldrich, Pearl Monroe, Lillie Keitzer and Evelyn Shanda, gave a candle lighting service. The banquet room and table were decorated with lavender and gold flowers, ferns and tall candles.

The losers, captained by Mrs. B. R. Job, in a recent membership and attendance contest of the Presbyterian ladies' aid society entertained the winners, captained by Mrs. George Matthews, with a party Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Joe T. Smith. Over 40 were present. A short business meeting was held and a program was given. A pleasant social afternoon was enjoyed. Dainty refreshments were served.

Mrs. H. A. Miller entertained Friday at bridge for the O. L. H. club. Mrs. W. W. McFarland held high score and Mrs. James P. Graham held low. At the close of the afternoon dainty refreshments were served. Mrs. T. C. Wheeler was a special guest for the afternoon. Artistic May baskets, colorful decorations about the rooms and a bowl of azaleas formed an attractive centerpiece for the table.

At a meeting of the Mothers' club Tuesday of last week, Mrs. Mary Smith, president of the club for the past year, resigned her office on account of ill health. Mrs. Charles Stevens was elected to fill the vacancy. The committee in charge of the chicken dinner served to the public on that day reported receipts of $40.

Remarkable Jaw Power of East Indian Lizard

The strength of jaw of warm-blooded animals cannot compare with that of reptiles. An article in Pearson's Weekly points out. The bulldog and mastiff are famous for their strength of grip and the hyena is said to be able to bite through the thigh bone of an ox to extract the marrow, but they take back seats to the power and tenacity of a lizard in the Calcutta reptile house.

The lizard was of the sort known as the "go-saump" and weighed about 100 pounds. As it was being drawn out of the cage which it shared with the pythons, it seized a 12-foot snake by the neck. Locked together, the two creatures were drawn out. Keepers made every effort to lever the jaws of the lizard apart. But it was useless, and the python's neck was flat as a pancake when at last the lizard let go.

A record illustration of the muscular power of the turtle was given by the late Frank Butler. He and his mates captured an immense turtle weighing 1,800 pounds and cut it open. They removed all the meat and left only the head attached to the shell.

A young man began examining the head and foolishly put his fingers into the turtle's mouth. They were bitten off as cleanly as if they had been cut.

Historian Sees Symbol in "Song of Nibelungs"

A strange theory, according to which the "Song of the Nibelungs" is partly a symbolic description of multiracial processes, has been published by the German historian, Carl Ludwig Antz. While Herr Antz does not deny that some of the personalities and motives of the song may have a historical background, his thesis is that the poet of the Nibelungs used old fairy tales and myths merely as a garment. The life of Siegfried, Herr Antz contends, is full of such indications. In his opinion, it is highly remarkable that metals have been mined in the territory around the city of Worms, the seat of the Nibelungs, for several thousand years. Siegfried's fight against the dragon is explained as a symbolic interpretation of mining. Brunhilde, who lived in Brittany (not in Iceland), is described as the queen of tin, and Siegfried's sword, the Nibelung, is the king of copper. Gunther (copper) carries Brunhilde (tin) and the result is bronze. Alberich, the dwarf, is a miner who reveals the secret of mining to Siegfried.

"Erasmus Alms Box"

Erasmus, noted scholar and reformer of the Sixteenth century, with his friend, Dean Colet, founder of St. Paul's school, visited St. Nicholas' almshouse, in England, and one of the brethren ordered a holy relic for them to kiss, as was the custom before sprinkling guests with holy water, writes Lovina Walsh in the Boston Transcript. The relic in this case was a part of a shoe once worn by St. Thomas of Canterbury. The dean, it seems, was not kissing anybody's old shoes. He forthwith got hot under his clerical collar and became rhetorically hectic.

The scholarly Erasmus, on the contrary, was most courteous, and to make amends for the dean's misbehavior, he dropped a goodly sum into the alms box. Ever after, this box was known as "The Erasmus Alms Box."

Getting Deaf

A certain well-known local hypochondriac has a fear that of getting hard of hearing. His doctor assures him it isn't so, but he worries constantly about the possibility of becoming deaf.

His complex took the form of announcing to his office mates that he was going to buy some sort of an earphone, to see if that aided him. Consequently his colleagues were ready for him when he appeared with it next day, and whispered every word they addressed to him or to anyone in his presence.

New he's telling his doctor that the good man doesn't know what he's talking about. Maybe—but have you ever lived with a hypochondriac?—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Owl in Squirrel Nest

The long-eared owl is of medium size with extremely long ear tufts. They live throughout temperate North America and breed south to Virginia, Arkansas, northern Texas and southern California, spend the winter in most of their range and south to central Mexico. The nest, says Nature magazine, may be that of some large bird or squirrel, carelessly repaired; it is usually in a dense growth of evergreen trees and placed from ten to twenty feet up. They are very beneficial, for their food consists largely of meadow mice and other small mammals, insects, spiders, crickets, snakes; frogs, snails and earthworms are known to be taken as well.

Tribute to Mark Twain

In "My Mark Twain," William Dean Howells says: "It is in vain that I try to give a notion of the intensity with which he pierced the heart of life and the breadth of vision with which he comprehended the whole world and tried for the reason of things, and then left trying. Emerson, Longfellow, Lowell, Holmes—I knew them all, and all the rest of our ages, poets, seers, critics, humorists. They were like one another and like other literary men, but Clemens was sole, incomparable, the Lincoln of our literature."

Saxophone Inventor

There was a famous family of Belgian musical instrument makers named Sax. The inventor of the saxophone belonged to this family and his name was Antoine Joseph Sax, known as Adolphe Sax. He was born at Dinant, Belgium, November 6, 1814, and died in Paris, February 4, 1894. In 1845 he took out a patent for the sax-horn. On June 22 he registered the saxophone.

Profundity

One distinction nowadays is to write a book so incomprehensible that at least a dozen interpreters, who think they know more than the author, will write explanations of the original text.—Richmond Times Dispatch.

Presbyterian Church, Duncan P. Cameron, pastor—At the 11 o'clock hour the pastor will preach on "The Two Builders," last sermon in the series on the Sermon on the Mount. At the 8 o'clock evening service Dr. Paulkner, who spent 30 years in Alaska as a missionary of the Presbyterian church, will tell of work of the Presbyterian and Methodist churches in that country and will illustrate his talk with motion pictures. The Methodist and Baptist churches will join the Presbyterians for this service.
