Old New Orleans Bank

Outlived Stormy Days

When the war clouds of 1861 rolled across the port of New Orleans, the bank that was situated at Royal and Iberville streets linked its fortunes with the Confederacy. When General Butler, Union leader, was in command of New Orleans, he ordered the Banques des Citoyens to turn over to him the money or property in its possession belonging to anyone who had aided the Confederacy. The forced contribution amounted to $215,529. Later $306,400 was contributed by the dictates of General Butler. Another order for $37,000 was filled. To General Banks of General Butler's command, $111,450 was turned over by the order of the Federal Government.

The bank voluntarily contributed $250,000 to the Confederacy in 1861; it loaned the South $225,000 in coin in 1862; it paid pay rolls of various divisions of the Confederate army. With all these outgoings and no incoming, the old bank stood its ground and lived out its charter, which expired on January 10, 1911. It gave up then because it was impossible to have its charter renewed, due to the unprecedented liberality of its grant. No other charter of its kind has ever been issued in this country.—New Orleans Times-Picayune.

Danger in Dieting Fad

When Carried Too Far

While you are dieting to lose pounds beware that you do not also lose your health. Rigid diets are entirely unscientific and are lacking in the principles that keep the body well and strong, writes Frances B. Floore in Hygeia Magazine.

Diet victims are numerous. They are the debilitated rundown nervous creatures who rejoice over the loss of weight and yet wonder why they have lost their pep. It is unfortunate that dieting has become a fad, because now the art of dieting for health has fallen into disrepute, says Miss Floore.

The eighteen-day diet was analyzed by Miss Floore and she came to these conclusions: It is low in calories and causes a too rapid loss of weight and, consequently, wrinkles appear; it lacks protein to repair worn body tissues; it lacks calcium and iron and phosphorus, all of which are needed for the blood, bones and teeth, and blocks the essential vitamin A. It is so necessary in building resistance to safeguard against the infections that are met in everyday life.

Early American Government

Andrew McLaughlin, historian, says: "During the whole course of the Revolutionary war the central government was the Second Continental Congress. There was no written instrument defining the power of this body. It used such powers as it needed to use or was permitted to use by the people. The central government, if government it may be called, was a congress composed of delegates annually appointed by the states and to this body was given considerable authority. In this congress each state had one vote. No step could be taken without the consent of a majority of the states, and for many important measures the consent of nine of them was necessary. All states must agree to an amendment or alteration in the articles. The Continental Congress continued its formal existence until March 2, 1789. It then flickered and went out without any public notice."

Tricked!

"Now, you fellows, help yourselves to the cigars," cried Peters, with a genial smile, after dinner. "They are some my wife gave me for a birthday present."

Politely but firmly, man after man vowed that he had sworn off smoking, and the dinner party ended in a ghastly fizzle.

"Whatever did you tell such a fib about those cigars for?" asked Mrs. Peters in surprise, when the guests had departed. "You know I gave you slippers for a birthday present."

"Oh, that's all right, Mary!" replied her husband calmly. "That box of cigars cost me $5, and I can't afford to give any of them away."

Street Bonfires

Small fires are a delight on cool evenings to the children of the city streets. Old newspapers and stray bits of wood are enough to start a blaze that attracts a throng. Toes are trodden and sports, such as jumping over the flames, keep the youngsters interested. Nearby streets are scoured for fuel, and the extra wood is neatly piled up or kept in a large tin can or grocer's box. But if the fires grow too large, fed by the enthusiasm of the children, a friendly policeman or fireman is likely to interfere.

Retouched

Mary Jane's aunt noticed the picture of a little girl on the youngster's desk. It so happened that Mary Jane had quarreled with the little girl a short time before. "What a pretty little girl!" exclaimed the aunt. "Your little friend is very pretty."

"Oh, she isn't really pretty," corrected Mary Jane. "That picture has just been retouched."

Hard Language to Master

The meaning of a word in Chinese is indicated by the musical tone in which it is uttered. One word may have as many as five different tones, each of which, when sounded, gives the word an entirely different meaning.

Beads and Barbarism

From time immemorial the human race resorts to beads and trinkets for ornament as well as for charm against the forces of evil. In Genesis, we read that the servants of Isaac brought earrings and bracelets to Rebekah, as well as to her brother and her mother; in Exodus, we find both men and women, as many as were willing hearted, brought bracelets and earrings, and rings and jewels of gold as an offering for the building of the tabernacle.

Olive Long in Favor

The olive is the oldest fruit known. Thousands of years before the Christian era its growth and harvesting was one of the chief industries in Asia Minor.

NEWS STAFF.

Another school year is nearing its close and the news staff wishes to take this opportunity to thank Mr. Bede for allowing it a column in The Sentinel each week in which to print news of the high school and its various activities. The staff feels that the high school news notes have helped to interest the public in the well-being of Cottage Grove high school. Much credit is also due the members of the staff who have done all the news writing outside of their regular school work.

The agriculture classes visited the Charles Pear turkey ranch on the Row river Wednesday to discuss the value of new ideas in the handling of turkey eggs.

The freshman agriculture class sent two delegates, Clyde Smith and Niles Mambek, to the junior high school Thursday to discuss the value of attending high school for an agricultural education.

The boys of the agriculture classes gave the girls of the home economics department a picnic Wednesday evening at Kelly bridge. Herman Lafky, agriculture instructor, and Laurence Kent, agriculture student, have been invited to the Farmers' Union convention at McMinnville Wednesday of next week. Laurence is to give his oration, "The Relation of Agriculture to the Current Depression."

The agriculture department had a display of its work in the industrial show at the armory last week. The thrift account conducted by the local Future Farmers of America shows a total savings of $26 at the close of the school year.

Preregistration for students entering school next fall was held Monday morning during activity period. All preregistration work is now being completed.

William Averill, former senior class adviser, assisted by Loren Harvey, class dad, will entertain the senior class with a picnic at Hanna's grove, Saturday from 4 to 8 o'clock.

The orchestra will play for the eighth grade graduation exercises.
