Child Shows Ingenuity Planning Party

The ingenuity of a 7-year-old child was demonstrated last Friday in the case of little Miss Billie Ann Butler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Butler, who wished to give a surprise birthday party for her mother but was unable to bake the birthday cake herself. She inveigled her mother into baking a chocolate cake, not telling for what she wished it. That afternoon the child called her mother home and on her arrival Mrs. Butler found a birthday party awaiting her, with the cake as the main feature of the refreshments.

Health Awards Made.
Thirty blue ribbon health badges were presented to pupils in the grade schools Monday forenoon by Mrs. Schofield Stewart, chairman of the local public health group. The children to receive them were ones who had conformed with the required health program outlined by the health association for the year. The requirements for such recognition follow: within standard average; satisfactory posture; no physical defects, such as poor teeth, bad tonsils, adenoids, poor eyesight or hearing, etc.; immunized against diphtheria and smallpox; reasonably cooperative in health habits.

Haircut War Lowers Price.
The price of haircuts in Cottage Grove was lowered to 25 cents this week as the result of a price war among local barbers. It is rumored that a mutual agreement is in the offing and that the barbers will combine on a higher price than 25 cents.

Former Resident Dies.
MOUNTAIN VIEW, May 27.—(Special).—Mrs. Jean Long, who visited here last week, was called to Portland Friday by a message stating that an uncle, L. A. Whitcomb, with whom she had been making her home, had died suddenly while standing on a street in Portland. Mr. Whitcomb was a resident of Cottage Grove many years ago and had visited in this vicinity early this spring. He was also an uncle of Mrs. J. W. Fisher.

Gorgeous Funeral Even for Lowliest Chinaman

The Chinese pay their doctors not to cure their ill but to keep them well, because, though it is cheap for them to live, it is exceedingly expensive to die. Even the poorest and most miserable coolie, who existed on a few cents a day, attends dignity and importance in death among his ancestor-worshipping fellows. His family will mortgage its income for years to give him a funeral consistent with its ideal of prestige.

For the rich mandarin the final honors are proportionately greater. And to provide a fitting send-off to distinguished citizens the Nanking government has adopted a state burial law allowing $10,000 funeral expenses in meritorious cases. Often when a death occurs in China a necromancer is called in to arrange details and name an auspicious day for interment, which may take place from one to five weeks after death. During this period relatives and friends, in white mourning, lament loudly in the death chamber. Buddhist priests read incense, prayers for the departed spirit. Candles burn. Blue, perfumed incense ascends in clouds. On the day of burial a procession forms, made up partly of palm mourners. It is led by musicians with drums, cymbals, flutes and flutes. Its size and splendor depend on the amount of money the bereaved family can spend.

Writer Advises Letting Young Authors Struggle

Rising young authors ought to struggle. It is the only way to prove they are good for anything. It is not wisdom to give a prize of $13,000 for a first novel. The book is written for the prize, not as a talented emanation that could not be withheld.

Prizes are now dangled everywhere by publishers for all sorts of literary output. Yet we know that the best of all literature is that which bubbles out with no greedy eye on what is to be paid for it.

Not but that the really precious should be rewarded as it deserves. While one may still feel a qualm that poor Milton got but £10 (wasn't it?) for "Paradise Lost," he may rejoice that our modern authors live comfortably—many of them affluently—on the product of their pens. No one begrudges them wealth; but that wealth or the hope of it, should not corrupt their literary integrity.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Plymouth Rock Reunited

The secretary of the Pilgrim society says: "In 1774 the inhabitants of Plymouth decided to remove the famous rock to Town square and establish a shrine of liberty. When they attempted to raise it, however, it broke into two parts, one of which was permitted to remain and the other carried to its destination. It remained there until 1834, when it was removed to the yard yards in front of Pilgrim hall, where it was surrounded by an iron fence. It so remained until 1880, when it was removed and placed on that part of the rock from which it had been separated one hundred and six years before, and over which, meanwhile, an elaborate granite canopy may now be seen, in its original position, on the shore of Plymouth. The peristyle which now surrounds it was erected by the Society of Colonial Dames."

Origin of "Fore" Obscure

The origin of "Fore!" is veiled in antiquity, says an article in the New York Times. No satisfactory explanation can be found as to the time and method of its entrance as an accepted expression of "the Royal and Ancient Game of Golf," which received its first notice as a trouble maker in the Scotland of 1457. "Fore!" is defined in Jamison's Scottish dictionary, published in 1820, as a cry of golfers to persons standing or moving in the way of the ball. Probably, according to present-day authorities, the word began as "Before!" and, with proper Scottish regard for economy, was shortened to its present form.

Memorial Day and its message

Years have thinned the ranks which first paid tribute at the graves of fallen comrades on this day of ideals and memories.

New armies which fought for Liberty now are taking over the task of honor. There are newer graves to tend.

For the Living

"I am using RED ROSE BUTTER exclusively in my demonstrations this week at the Sentinel Free Cooking School.

"I believe in using plenty of butter in preparing my meals. Almost invariably butter improves the flavor of any food. There is also that element of health to consider. In Pure Dairy Products there are present many health giving properties that no good cook can afford to overlook, least of all accept substitutes."
