THE HIGHWAY COMMISSION.
There is little doubt that a large proportion of those who have read newspaper stories as to the troubles of the highway commission believe that the commission is doing its job in a most efficient manner. It is at least a fair right in some of its claims as to the expenses of the highway department.

Not having first hand information, the Sentinel does not know whether or not he is right, but from the way he went about getting publicity for his business, it is not so much as consultation with the co-members of the commission, from the manner in which he apparently endeavored to embarrass the two other members, this writer is led to believe that his claims are grossly exaggerated. If he really is as successful in his effort to put Commissioners Ainsworth and Hanley in the wrong light before the public, if he has succeeded in injuring the reputations of the two other commissioners, he is guilty of as great an offense as any commissioner who may have permitted extravagance in expenditures.

All who are familiar with affairs of the state know that Commissioners Ainsworth and Hanley were before them on the commission. All who are familiar with the state's affairs know that the two commissioners have no other in serving on the commission than to render a service to the state. Both had been eminently successful in business for many years prior to their appointment. They did not become successful by squandering their own money. They brought to the commission a knowledge of business that was of great value to the state.

It is reasonable to suppose that men who have been successful in their own business will endeavor to handle the state's business in the same manner. That is almost always the case. So the presumption must be that if Commissioners Ainsworth and Hanley made any errors made because they didn't care, they weren't made because they were inclined to be careless with state money.

If this presumption is correct, which it undoubtedly is, all that was necessary to bring about a reform in the commission's affairs was to prove these errors to the two commissioners. They are two men who would quickly discover any mistakes in their own judgment and would be quick to rectify such errors. The newspaper stories indicate that no such effort was made by the commission's Spaulding.

Another thing: A large proportion of the people believe Governor Meier is giving the state a business administration of the most efficient kind. Even most of his enemies will admit that he is doing his best to cut down the costs of government and to put efficient men on the state's payroll. When Governor Meier selected Ainsworth and Hanley, he did so because he thought them to be two of the best men in the state that could be selected for those positions. Until we have something more definite than former Commissioner Spaulding has presented we shall continue to believe that the appointments of Ainsworth and Hanley were two of the best appointments that the state has ever made. Spaulding's charge that the governor kept Spaulding from carrying out an economy program is a charge that is as far from the truth as anything said by Spaulding about his former associates.

It is to be regretted that one who has served the state so well should be considered something of a sterner pet because of a charge that he made. The governor's action in removing Spaulding indicates his disapproval of Spaulding's nagging activity and is recognition of the belief that no other man could be secured who would accept an appointment as Spaulding's associate and do some work that would serve Spaulding and his associates.

GOWNS IN OUR SCHOOLS.
A recent item in the high school news, the significance of which may have escaped the attention of many, said that a committee of students had been appointed by the school board to investigate the wearing of gowns for graduation. The expense of gowns for a girl graduate is a considerable sum. Parents of some could afford the expense. Parents of others could not. But whether or not parents could afford the expense, most of the girls had the gowns. A few could not have them, and the committee for this purpose probably was a tragedy.

But this year, through action of the graduating class itself, the cost of gowns is to be made moderate. The girls who can afford high priced gowns will be dressed in the same manner as the girls who cannot. Many a heartache will be saved through this action of the students themselves.

Our schools should be our most democratic institution. The students of Cottage Grove high, through their action, are helping to make them a democratic institution. Those who can afford better are willing to appear on an equal basis with those who cannot, and many parents who would make sacrifices to see their girls dressed as well as other girls, welcome the relief that is theirs.

It speaks well for the graduating class that they have these democratic ideas. We may well place the affairs of city, county, state and nation in the hands of young folk who are ready to level the differences of wealth, who are ready to do away with classes that result from one person having more wealth than another, who are ready to do their part to take the heartaches out of commencement and make it an affair equally as enjoyable for each one concerned.

LETTERS TO EDITOR.
So many letters to the editor have been submitted this week that it is impossible to give space to all of them. However, the subjects are such that their publication in later issues will serve the same purpose as if published in this issue. They will appear as rapidly as space will permit. One such letter is from Councilman Andrew Brund and his statement as to the financial condition of the water department.

There are only two periods in a man's life when he is likely to make himself a fool over a woman—before he is 45, and after he is 45.

Good streets are desirable—but they are nevertheless poor educational institutions for the youth of the land.

Sometimes a man makes a jackass of himself over a girl and slips his head into the halter.

It's hard for the two-faced person to look you in the eye.

ACT FOR PEACE.
Cottage Grove, Ore., Feb. 16.—(To the Editor.)—Words can hardly express the possibilities of an intelligent public opinion on international relations and on policy for peace at this critical time. This, a time when each and every one must assume a missionary of interest and duty in the affairs of our country, is a most logical period to awaken the public mind as to the influence it may have in shaping a policy of real value to the common people—the biggest task it is possible to perform in this world.

By telegrams, letters and petitions we can inform our senators and representatives that we urge that the strength of the United States be used in making peace. In just what way this may be done it is difficult for the average citizen to suggest, at least without considerable study and thought. However we can and should express our desires especially since war making interests are actively at work in Washington, D. C.

The return of two Oregon delegates from the national convention of the National Association of Public Opinion is a most interesting event. They have returned with a petition upon which they have pressed their views on the Washington. Petitions have been presented at the churches and various organizations of our city. Anyone who has not had an opportunity to sign should see Duncan P. Cameron, I. G. Shaw or M. A. Truett.
