SCHOOL GRABBING.
It is not so very long ago that The Sentinel said higher education would have to do something to make higher education less expensive and make it something that the masses could have or higher education would have to fight for its life.

Now the wrecking crews are at work and what they purpose would be likely make higher education even more expensive than it now is, at least millions and millions of dollars would be wasted.

To a certain extent those who would revamp higher education have had the support of sane and sober persons, but this move to move the university to Corvallis and make a girls' boarding house out of the university, with the law school moved to Salem and normal schools revamped for kindergartens or something else can not have the approval of those who have the welfare of higher education and the welfare of the state at heart.

Plenty was being done to higher education before this latest move.

was started. There was considerable danger that higher education would be injured by the readjustments being made by the state board of higher education members of which are honestly endeavoring to cure the disease without killing the patient, but the results of this proposal to tear things to pieces and move them higher and on ought to have about the same beneficial effect as if we transferred a man's stomach to his head just to see whether it would function in the new location.

The Sentinel does not believe there is any chance of voters acting favorably upon such an outlandish, destructive, extravagant proposal, nevertheless the university city and normal school cities and friends of a sane higher education are going to have to put up a real battle to save the state from doing one of the most foolish things it ever has been proposed that it should do.

WITTHOLD JUDGMENT.
Withhold judgment until you know all the facts. That is the appeal that was made in a public meeting Sunday forenoon by one who said that he is being hounded by a powerful organization that would discredit him and drive him from his chosen life work.

Regardless of what our own opinions may be about what someone else may have done, the appeal to withhold judgment until all the facts are known is a reasonable one. To withhold judgment until the facts are known is the charitable thing to do. It is the manly thing to do. Such an appeal is one to which each one of us should be responsive.

Regions of what our own opinions may be about what someone else may have done, the appeal to withhold judgment until all the facts are known is a reasonable one.

Why add to that unpleasantness by pre-judging before the facts are known? Many an innocent person has suffered severely because we are too prone to judge without knowing what the facts are, too prone to talk with little care as to whether the facts are as gossip says they are.

Withhold judgment until the facts are known. Judge not lest ye be judged.

CONGRESSIONAL GRAFT.
This writer has upon numerous occasions criticized payroll padding at the Oregon legislature, but this seems to have been petty stuff compared with what a national news service is exposing in the national capital.

It is almost unbelievable that men big enough to serve in the national congress would stoop to the practice of putting on the payroll those who couldn't fill positions for which they were appointed and weren't expected to do so. The Sentinel doesn't care who is hit by this criticism. It hopes that the news service that is prying into this graft will tear the lid clear off.

The Sentinel can see no great objection to a member of congress giving a job to a relative who actually earns the money he receives, but paying government money to those who do nothing to earn that money except to sign the payroll is a practice that can not be condoned.

That senators and representatives themselves knew the practice to be a shady one is indicated by the fact that the payroll has been kept secret and by the fact that the big fight is being made to still keep it secret. At Salem the legislators are honest enough to publish their payrolls in full.

A flock of hens down at Gold Beach which produced oversize eggs all last year are this year producing eggs of the size of marbles. The hens have learned more quickly than humans in 1755. Longitudinal vibrations of bars were investigated by Chladni (1756-1837). The history of the phenomena of the sense of bearing, harmony, etc., begins probably with the earliest days of civilization. It was known to Pythagoras in the Sixth Century B. C. Much research was conducted by Helmholtz beginning with 1854.

Seedless Oranges
The raising of seedless oranges was originally a "sport," propagated in Brazil by means of budding, and the seedless oranges now grown in the United States are descended from two imported Brazilian trees. Buds or "budding sticks," as they are called, are taken from seedless orange trees of ordinary type. When the buds send out shoots the seedlings are cut back, so that only the budding portions develop. The umbilication in seedless oranges is caused by the malformation of the pistillate blossoms, which withers without being fertilized, as nature provides no means of pollination.

Biting Remarks
What is the most biting thing ever said by a statesman about a political opponent? I have always put highest Disraeli's description of John Stuart Mill as a finishing governess, and the saying, usually attributed to Lord Balfour, that if a certain politician had a little more brains, he might be described as half-witted. But here is an acid comment from an unexpected quarter. Gladstone's style was too rhetorical as a rule to permit of epigrams. But he once observed of a man whom he distrusted that "he was the cat, seated on the porch, broken leg and all. No one knows what happened to the bag and the stone."

Pussy Came Back
A cat belonging to I. Quirk, of Sault Ste. Marie, Ontario, was believed to have broken a leg, so it was decided to dispatch it. The cat was placed in a bag with a large stone, and the tied bag was dropped over the brink of a 123-foot waterfall. When the executioners returned to Mr. Quirk's house, there was the cat, seated on the porch, broken leg and all. No one knows what happened to the bag and the stone.

Ancient Notion Incorrect
The weather bureau says there is no reason why storms should be more frequent or severe on September 21 or 22 (autumnal equinox) than on September 10 or 11, say, or 20 or 30, nor, in fact, are they. The same is true of the spring or vernal equinox. This whole notion about "equinoctial storms" is erroneous, and it even is uncertain now, where, when or by whom the idea was started. It is only known that in one form or another it goes back at least to 1748.

"East" and "West"
"Never the twain shall meet" is a phrase borrowed from the poem "The Ballad of East and West," by Rudyard Kipling. The full significance of the expression can be gained only by reading the entire poem. Isolated from the text the lines are interpreted as meaning "that people of the eastern civilization, such as the Chinese and the Japanese, and those of the western civilization, such as the English and the American, cannot affiliate upon a truly friendly basis."

No Reference to Fowls in the Old Testament
To the thoughtful reader of the Holy Scriptures it may appear curious that in the history they contain of the rise, progress and habits of a purely pastoral people like the Jews, there should be no mention of cocks and hens in the Old Testament, although references by name are frequent to the animals bred, employed or cared for there. No modern general farm would be considered completely stocked if there were no fowls about the barnyard or no poultry-run. In India, which is the native home of the peacock, such fowls have run wild from remote antiquity. Solomon had peacocks brought to Jerusalem as objects of beauty and signs of opulence. But apparently his emissaries found nothing very interesting in the wild fowls, which are diminutive in comparison with our carefully bred birds, and resemble extreme skinny types of the fighting game cocks of Mexico and of the Far East.

At any rate domestic fowls do not appear to have made their way into the Land of Israel until after the tribes may have brought them along from the Persians, who had introduced them from India before that period.

Bishops Hold "Commune"
With Long-Dead Ruler
Before a new bishop is enthroned in Winchester cathedral he has to have an interview with William the Conqueror. On his way to the cathedral he goes into a small church in the High Street and there remains alone for a few minutes. The origin of the custom is this: In the days of the great Norman new bishops went to his palace as an act of loyalty before going to the cathedral. So strong was the hold he had on men's minds that even after he was dead they continued the custom. The little church of St. Lawrence stands on the site of the Conqueror's palace, and so for centuries the bishops have been visiting the church, there to commune with the spirit of the Conqueror. "There can be few other men," remarks an English writer, "who have so set their mark on the world that people pay them state visits more than 800 years after their death."—London Mail.

Washington Tree Planter
There is a phase of Washington's career which is not always mentioned in articles concerning him, but which is a very interesting one. He was an enthusiastic tree planter and collector, and he sent to far-off places for particular varieties of trees that he wished to plant at Mount Vernon. During the years from 1783 to 1785, following the end of the Revolutionary war and preceding his election to the Presidency, Washington spent practically all his time improving the large estate at Mount Vernon, laying out his grounds and making his plantings. Still growing at Mount Vernon are 45 trees which were planted by Washington during his lifetime.

History of Sound
The history of sound is practically identical with the progress of mathematics and dynamics from the time of Galileo and Newton to the present, and few dates can be assigned to definite discoveries. The laws of vibrations of a stretched string were first deduced mathematically by Brook Taylor in 1715 and by Daniel Bernoulli in 1755. Longitudinal vibrations of bars were investigated by Chladni (1756-1837). The history of the phenomena of the sense of bearing, harmony, etc., begins probably with the earliest days of civilization. It was known to Pythagoras in the Sixth Century B. C. Much research was conducted by Helmholtz beginning with 1854.

Lindamood of Bradwood, became the bride of Max Sears, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Sears of Delight valley. Rev. Duncan P. Cameron read the services in the presence of a group of relatives and immediate friends. The bride wore a charming lace dress of pale rose beige. Miss Gale Lindamood, sister of the bride, acting as bridesmaid, wore a gown of pale green organza. Charles D. Huff was best man. The bride is a graduate of Oregon state normal and taught school the past two years. The groom is a graduate of Eugene Business college. Mr. and Mrs. Sears will make their home at Bradwood, where Mr. Sears has for some time held a position as bookkeeper for Bradley-Woodard Lumber company.

Divide, May 31.—The J. A. Mackey, M. J. Perini and Charles Arnold families attended a picnic at the home of the Norman Suter family on Bear creek Wednesday evening. The gathering was in honor of Mrs. Suter's birthday anniversary. Present were Mrs. Suter, Miss Maxine Rohde and Claude Sheets, were presided at the wedding ceremony. The bride was the daughter of the groom's parents, the young folks drove to Cottage Grove and returned with Rev. Duncan Cameron, who performed the ceremony and Mrs. Marie Nixon and Delbert Safley, who attended the bride couple. The ceremony was performed by the light of a candle.

Dan Lunan and Miss Edith Dorothy Leonard were married in Eugene Wednesday at the home of County Judge Barnard, who officiated. Witnessing the ceremony were the bride's sister, Mrs. Ray Weldon, the latter's daughters, Betty Louise and Della Mae, and the bride's father, Arthur A. Leonard. The ceremony was performed on the seventh anniversary of Mrs. Weldon's wedding. The newly married couple are making their home on east Madison avenue.

Dice of Asiatic Origin?
It is not known how and in what manner dice actually originated. Wherever dice have been found in the tombs of ancient Egypt, in Greece, or in the Far East, they differ in no material respect from those in use today. They were probably evolved from knuckle-bones. It is certain that dice games were played in times prior to those of which we have any written record. The fact that dice have been used throughout the Orient from time immemorial seems to indicate an Asiatic origin.

ELECTRICITY IS CHEAP
NEVER in the history of all the world has electricity been so cheap and never before has electric cooking equipment been priced so low. It is no longer necessary to envy your neighbor's freedom from her kitchen because she has modern electric cooking equipment. You can enjoy the same comforts and conveniences with time outside the kitchen for recreation and improvement as the rest of the family. Expense need no longer stand in the way of your own electrical kitchen. A small down payment will place an electric range in your kitchen with no charge for installation or wiring. Inspect them in hardware, furniture and electrical stores.
