Bear Family Widespread Throughout the World

From Polar regions where the huge white bear is the ruler of snowy wastes, to the tropics where the little cinnamon bear haunts the jungle, or to the Antipodes where much smaller plantigrades are styled bears, every part of the world has, or appears to have had, some member of the bear family among its aboriginal inhabitants.

Despite the evidence of Scripture skeptical critics for years derided the idea of bears existing in Syria or the Holy Land. Ignorance of ordinary historical facts was part of the equipment of these doubters. They knew nothing of, nor studied the accounts of the life history of the good knight Godfrey of Bouillon, who with his brothers Eustace and Baldwin led an army of forty thousand German soldiers to join the crusade to deliver Jerusalem from the Saracens towards the end of the Eleventh century, and who during the long siege of Antioch in Syria went alone to the defense of a poor woodcutter against a fiercely attacking bear, in which encounter he was badly mauled, although he did come out of the conflict victoriously at the last. Certainly Godfrey de Bouillon would bear witness to the fact that there was nothing incongruous in the story David told of having killed a bear in protecting his father's sheep at Bethlehem (Samuel 17:34-36).

It was a ruthless spelling bee that the Catholic Actors' guild held. According to all reports, the spellers who remained in the lineup towards the finish had to submit to heckling by the members already downed, and the announcer was severe with all attempts to get a word repeated. In the old-fashioned spelling bees it used to be all right to ask teacher to repeat while the spellers thought furiously in the minute gained.

The rule in this one was elimination of the person making the error. In school you went to the foot of the class and tried to work your way back to the top, but it was a hopeless game for a naturally poor speller. At the end of the session there was a gloomy little group down at the foot, always composed of the same sad individuals.

How the good spellers manage it is a mystery to those who cannot. They can tackle and conquer a word of which they probably never heard through some special faculty—probably just a sense of spell.—New York Times.

Sleep Center in Brain?

A sleep center in the brain is postulated by the Austrian neurologist, C. von Economo, in the American Journal of Nervous and Mental Diseases.

While this center is not exactly located, he says, those diseases which show disturbance of the sleep function, such as the abnormally prolonged slumber of encephalitis, show lesions in the neighborhood of the third ventricle of the brain. Cats have been made to yawn and assume positions of rest when this region is stimulated with electricity.

Von Economo believes that the nerve cells of this region are particularly susceptible to some fatigue substance which circulates in the blood and that once stimulated they inhibit the action of the higher nervous centers. Thus it is able to act as a sentry for the rest of the brain.

Special Postage Stamps

Athletics and field sports of almost every kind have been the subject of special issues of postage stamps in many parts of the world, which makes a striking and original collection. When the ancient festival of Olympic games was first revived at Athens five and twenty years ago, the Greek government gave as a contribution toward the expenses of the undertaking the proceeds of the sale of a series of stamps commemorating the glories of the Olympiads of former days, the classic designs of which embraced a contest of gladiators, a disk thrower and a quadriga or racing chariot all copied from famous statues or bas-reliefs.

Control of snow drift is accomplished in a variety of ways by the departments of the various states, according to a survey of snow-removal methods. Hedge and shrubbery have been planted in some states to provide natural drift control. A snow fence of sacks has been used in Michigan effectively.
