PROPOSED MEASURES FLOOD LEGISLATURE
Bulk of Bills Arrives After Session Half Gone; Solons May Work Overtime.

By ELBERT BEDE.
State Capitol, Salem, Ore., Jan. 30.—A flood that inundated Lane county recently had nothing on the flood here during the past few days of proposed legislation. With the session that some bills of bills has just arrived and is just being referred to committees, which gives rise to a belief that the calendar can not be cleaned up until tomorrow, 40 days for which legislators receive pay. Clerks and employees, however, remain on the payroll until the last minute.
A legislative and rules committee of the house, which gives the once over to all proposed bills before they reach the chief clerk's pigeon holes, was swamped over the week end and was able to get out only a portion of its work, for which reason time for introduction of bills was extended until tomorrow. The senate has no such committee and legislation submitted there gets on its way immediately. The house method undoubtedly saves time in the long run and catches jokers and errors, as the employees of this committee carefully scrutinize every bill to see that amendments are properly made, that other sections needing amendment are not overlooked and that repeats of present law are correctly made. Many members do not feel qualified to draw bills, and the employees of this committee do much of that work for them.
The fact that at least half of proposed legislation has arrived within the past week is not entirely the fault of members, for the titles of bills indicate that they have been introduced by interested parties over the state, who have been dilatory in getting their proposed legislation here but probably will introduce the session for not getting into full swing the first few days. However, as stated in preceding correspondence, time has not been wasted. Committees, especially ways and means and taxation and revenue, have been working on important problems and have accomplished much.
The principal business of the session, unemployment relief, new revenue, relief for automobile owners, etc., has or will originate in the house, and the first big bill that for unemployment relief will be up tomorrow, the first of the major bills to reach the calendar. An attempt to rush this through last week failed, to a large extent because hesitating new members fear being rushed off their feet. New members are picking their own way to a greater extent than in any other session I have ever attended. They also have another outstanding characteristic, they do not feel that they are here to blow off the dome, tracking records for home consumption.
A major subject of the last session that failed of legislative enactment, old age pensions, has had no consideration at this session. Members probably feel that relief of unemployment is about all the business of that character that they can take care of this year.

LUMBER OUTLOOK NOT ENCOURAGING

Reluctance of Retailers to Anticipate Spring Needs Proves Handicap.

(Crew's Lumber Digest.)
No appreciable change has taken place in general outlook on the lumber market during the past two weeks. Without question there has been less doing since the first of January than at any time in the past three years. If this were true alone of lumber it might be easy to understand but all lines are feeling a further falling off in business which is bringing trading of all kinds almost to a standstill.
The most discouraging feature of buying today is the reluctance of the retailers to in any degree anticipate their spring needs. This means one of two things, either they do not feel that the outlook for building is such that they will need any lumber or that they will have call for no more lumber than can be purchased in mixed cars for quick loading in time to take care of their customers.
The railroads made quite a sizable volume of placements for maintenance-of-way material mostly during December. The veneered work in which this business was released is causing some to wonder whether it was purposely designed in the justifiable hope that it might give other lines of business the confidence necessary to start a general revival. If that was true it has failed in its purpose even though the orders which the railroads have given to the sawmills, especially in the fir districts of Oregon and Washington, have provided a lot of employment and in no small manner given relief to people who were needing it badly.
The manufacturers are putting on a brave front, trying to hold small gains in prices made in some markets during the latter part of 1932. Unless the volume of placements improves within another 30 days the danger of losing some of this valuable gained ground is great. In the meantime everything seems to be pointing to March 4 and already business men are beginning to wonder what, if anything, Roosevelt can do to bring about an improvement. The ambition of most individuals at the present moment is not so much to increase their revenue as it is to cut down expenses so as to ride out the storm. With such a frame of mind very little progress is likely to be made so it is not improbable that the next 30 days will see folks reconciled to holding up, awaiting that promised March 4 when Roosevelt will be expected to wave the mystic wand and in some way, some how, introduce a program for relief.
The eagles broadcast given over radio station KOBE Wednesday evening was presented before a large audience here Tuesday night in I. O. O. F. hall in the form of a dress rehearsal. The program was as follows: Yodel duet, "My Dear Old Sunny South by the Sea," Jack Holcomb and Clarence Long; harmonica, "The Girl I Left Behind Me," "Cut Down the Old Pine Tree," "The Merry Widow," "The Girl Dressed in Blue" and "Life on the Ocean Waves," yodel, "Daddy and Home," Jack Holcomb; harmonica, "S. S. Bukowski and Loren Harvey; numbers by the orchestra, "The Girl I Left Behind Me," "Cut Down the Old Pine Tree" and "The Merry Widow." The eagles broadcast will be given over KOBE the third Wednesday of each month and a dress rehearsal will be given in I. O. O. F. hall each Tuesday night preceding.

DAIRY COW PROBLEMS STUDIED AT MEETING

Problems of controlling contagious abortion in dairy cattle were discussed thoroughly at a dairy meeting held Tuesday evening at the Silk creek school house. It was reported that many cattle which have been found to be reactors are being resold in the valley as good dairy cows. It was pointed out that if these cows are fire-branded when they show up as reactors to the disease, they easily could be recognized and this would make it easier to control the disease.
Various agricultural subjects will be offered each Tuesday evening to people of the community as a special service by the agricultural department of Cottage Grove high school, under the direction of B. L. Young, vocational agricultural teacher.
At the next meeting the problem of feeding the dairy cow will be discussed. The meetings are free and everybody is welcome. The meeting will be held at 7:30 Tuesday evening at the Silk creek school house.

City Again Threatened By Flood Waters

Cottage Grove was threatened with another flood Thursday night of last week, a sudden drop in temperature preventing a recurrence of the inundation early in January. Basements of several homes in the city had several inches of water in them. Silk creek went out of its banks, the main bridge on River road was damaged and the Coast fork rose several feet but did not reach flood stage.
Flood waters in Silk creek took out a post and a fill at the River road bridge by the Cottage Grove flour mill. These were part of the repairs of damage caused by the first flood. Traffic over the bridge was not interrupted.
Warm rains Thursday melted snow in the vicinity of the city, bringing up the water. That the flood was no worse was thought due to the fact that several inches of cold in the surrounding hills, preventing the several feet of snow from melting off, and that the temperature in the city dropped.
Water in city basements receded quickly.

The heirs of the late Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Godard recently donated 40 books to the library.
