Royal Flower of Japan

Is the Chrysanthemum

During the chrysanthemum season in Japan the emperor gives a great festival in honor of this flower, for the beautiful blossom, beautiful as the dower of royalty, has been singled out as the flower of royalty.
The chrysanthemum has 16 petals only, and its use for the imperial crest goes back many centuries.

There are many legends that cluster around this flower, one of the best known being that the fairies make a wine of forgetfulness from the petals of the blossoms. The name is derived from two Greek words meaning Gold Flower, and in Japan it is known as the White Dragon, Starlit Night, Sleepy Head, the Golden Dew. In China it is called "The King of a Hundred Flowers," and in both China and Japan receives great adoration. The chrysanthemum was brought to this country some 50 years ago and today it is offered in many, many varieties in both perennial and annuals.

Credit Babylon With

Paper Money "Invention"

In Europe paper to represent money first came into use, apparently, during the Middle Ages, when the Jewish financiers of those days revaluated the bills of exchange of Babylon and recorded them in ink on parchment and paper, says a bulletin of the National Geographic society. Individuals also accepted deposits of coin and bullion for safe keeping and issued receipts payable on demand. Thus, the first modern gold and silver certificates circulated from hand to hand in place of deposits.

The Bank of St. George at Genoa and the Bank of Venice were the first corporations to use paper money. Their bills were bullion certificates. Because the use of these receipts was so much more convenient than carrying about heavy bags of gold and silver, they became popular with merchants and even circulated at a premium over coin.

Art

We hear a lot about art for art's sake and almost every large city in the world has at least one small spot peopled with enthusiasts who insist on painting what they like even though they starve.

But the real old masters of art were not like this if we are to believe the stories handed down about them. A great English lady, after admiring one of Whistler's paintings exclaimed:

"Don't you feel delighted when you turn a common piece of canvas into a thing of beauty?"

"Indeed I do, madame," replied the great artist, "but I'm infinitely delighted when I have turned the thing of beauty into a meal ticket."

Drudgery

Of all the work that produces results, nine-tenths must be drudgery.
There is no work, from the highest to the lowest, which can be done well by any man who is unwilling to make that sacrifice. Part of the very nobility of the devotion of the true workman to his work, consists in the fact that a man is not daunted by finding that drudgery must be done; and no man can really succeed in any walk of life without a good deal of what, in England, is called pluck. That is the condition of all success. And there is nothing which so repays itself as the very perseverance against weariness.— Doctor Temple.

For Cut Glass Vases

Out glass vases sometimes become stained badly and the stains are found difficult to remove. The most effective method of removing them, says the Manchester (England) Guardian, is to use tea leaves which have just been soaked in hot water.
Place the tea leaves in the vase and fill it up with warm water.
Allow the water and leaves to remain in the vase all night, when it will be found that the stain will wash off easily. Should the stains prove particularly stubborn, a little vinegar will be found effective.

True Sympathy

Passive sympathy or fellow-feeling is nothing but sentiment; it does not cheer the depressed; it does not comfort the afflicted; it does not "visit the fatherless"; it does not clothe the naked; it does not feed the hungry. Genuine sympathy must be active, real, positive and practical; it must cheer, comfort, heal, clothe and feed. As Deen Farrar put it, "If love shows not itself in deeds of love, then our Christianity is heathenism, and our religion a delusion and a sham."— C. F. Griffiths.

Theory Given Up

The idea of the existence of a continent of Lemuria is no longer accepted. The name was given by Haeckel to a vast area assumed to exist in past ages and including the present Africa, Indian ocean and Malayan archipelago. The belief was based on the hypothesis that the existence of such a continent was necessary to explain the peculiar present distribution of the lemurs. However, the discovery of the remains of lemurs in America and Africa rendered such an hypothesis untenable.

OUTLOOK FOR LUMBER

INDUSTRY FAVORABLE

The outlook for the lumber industry for 1934 is more favorable than it has been in years. Col. W. E.
Grealey, secretary-manager of the West Coast Lumbermen's association, told members of the Willamette Valley Lumbermen's association at a meeting last Friday night in Eugene.

No great improvement can be expected within the next two months, however, the speaker said.

Lumber stocks on the coast have been reduced 42 per cent in the past year, and there is a demand for small residence building throughout the nation, he said. The C. L. A. has drawn plans for a campaign of small residence building which is expected to aid the industry.

Lumbermen will have to fight competition among other building materials more than ever this year, according to Col. Grealey.

J. S. Magliadry of Culp Creek, president of the Willamette Valley Lumbermen's association, reported on the legislative fight of the lumbermen against the proposed severance tax on timber.
