THE RIGHT SPIRIT.

The spirit that has made the United States the greatest nation in the world, the spirit that is going to bring us back from whatever it is that is the trouble with us now, is illustrated in a letter from Cottage Grove published in a recent issue of the Eugene Register-Guard.

It is difficult for a person to keep his spirits up when a number are dependent upon him, when he has payments to make that can't be met and prospects are not any too rosy for providing for a family without asking charity.

This man, name withheld, relates that his family are sleeping upon straw ticks, and articles of clothing take the place of needed bedding, yet he hasn't called upon any organization for relief, with the exception that he has been given a week's work upon the roads.

Without casting any reflection upon those who have accepted aid in cases of dire necessity, this man makes this appeal:

"Friends and neighbors, don't be quickers, don't lose all your self-respect. Call forth your pride, learn to get along the best you can and as you did before we had a chance to take advantage of the Red Cross and county help.

"So live before your children that they will have respect for their parents and thank you for helping them to help themselves."

It is possible to be happy and contented on much less than we used to have, a lesson that all in the community have learned well during recent years, and if all show the spirit that the writer referred to has displayed, it will not be long until we shall be able to have many of the things that we are at present forced to do without.

DEBTORS WHO CAN'T PAY.

Our country is now paying the price of cheap money and easy credit during the boom days. This is all that lies at the bottom of our present difficult financial situation. The situation is no different, except in degree, from similar situations which have followed every previous boom in our history. This time the whole world was taking part in the frenzy of speculation with easily borrowed money, and not only in America but in every other nation, debtors today outnumber the creditors, and creditors are reluctant to consent to the scaling down of debts and starting all over again.

It seems to us inevitable, that that is what must happen, in some directions this movement has already begun. No one who lent money on Krueger bonds or Insull securities, or on some of the obligations of foreign governments expects to get his money back, or any part of it. In many parts of the country there are not only municipalities but whole counties and groups of counties whose bonds are worth only a small percentage of what was borrowed on them.

Other important classes of debts have not yet, however, been scaled down. Farm mortgages based upon dust-time valuations can, in many cases, never be paid off. Bank loans made in flush times on security then worth many times what it is worth now, constitute an enormous burden of debt which hangs like a mill stone around the necks of hundreds of thousands or millions of small business men and manufacturers.

We do not believe that a return to real prosperity is possible until some means is found of scaling down these and other unpayable debts. We think all classes of creditors have got to take their medicine. We have no particular plan to bring this about, but we are confident that it is bound to come about sooner or later.—Springfield News.

We're still wondering how some luscious peach satin nighties with lace inserts and blue satin belts can sell for three dollars.—Portland Spectator.

It isn't the price that intrigues us.

Technocracy would reduce the workday to a few hours, which would be great for golf, but how about the poor service station man who would have to stay on the job to take care of motor parties on pleasure bent.

The earthquake may have been merely the shock caused by the Oregon legislature whacking appropriations and its own expenses.

A baby was born in a Los Angeles hospital just as the earthquake started, but probably more complete plans had been made for the baby.

The theory has been advanced that a man should have work to fit his brain, which must mean that we don't need as many jobs as we thought we did.

A man hit on the head regained his eyesight after being blind for 30 years. Being a person who things always did make sense to him, but eyesight is not worth as much now as it was before styles changed.

Fossil remains have been found of camels that stood about two feet in height. The great American camel has been feeling about that size recently.

Whistling is advanced as a cure for smoking. It would be more to the point if smoking were a cure for whistling.

A boy saved a fast train from going into a river, where a bridge had been washed out, by having a red cap. We presume trains have to be saved that way nowadays since women can no longer wave red petticoats.

COUNTY WILL GET BIG JOB PROGRAM

Reforestation Bill to Provide Work for Hundreds on Land Improvement.

Lane county and adjoining territory probably will be allotted in excess of one million dollars for land improvement work under President Roosevelt's reforestation bill now before congress. Perry A. Thompson, supervisor of the Cascade national forest, said Wednesday. "These funds will be used, not for planting trees, but for construction of roads, trails, highways, fire control improvements and other land improvement in federal and state forests, he said.

It will mean the employment of from 500 to 1500 men for the next year on these land improvement projects, work on which will start shortly after the bill is made a law. "There has been some misunderstanding of plans under the so-called reforestation bill of the president," Mr. Thompson explained. "The project really is one of land improvement. In the east, this may call for the planting of trees; in the south it may mean erosion control work, building reservoirs to control flood waters and the like.

"But here on the Pacific coast it means the improvement of state and national forests through construction of hundreds of miles of roads, trails, highways and other improvements. The state of Oregon will receive several millions of dollars for this work."

Preliminary details of the organization for the overhead control are now being set up by forest officials so that actual work can be started shortly after the act is passed.
