Inauguration Day.

The Continental congress, on September 13, 1788, selected the first Wednesday in the following March as the day on which proceedings under the federal Constitution should begin. On that day, which happened to be March 4, the terms of congressmen and executives began. As the terms of these officers were set for two, four and six years, it follows that they always begin and expire on March 4. The period between election and inauguration was made as great as it is because of the time required for communication and travel in those days between such distant states as New Hampshire and Georgia and the capital.

Self-Revelation.

We ourselves are the real word, the life utterance which speech often falsifies. There are faces which never deceive nor mislead us. A spiritual nature can but be frank and honest, because its foundation stones are laid in the truth, and it knows that nothing else holds. It is in us as human beings instinctively to recognize and hate insincerity. Nobody is in the end deceived by expression which is merely outward and perfunctory. Our inner life is transparent; it cannot conceal itself; if it is a true life it has no need or desire of concealment.—Lucy Larcom.

Proper Use of Washer.

If clothes are left in the household washing machine longer than the directions say they should be, they may come out gray. When a washer is run too long at a time, the soap breaks up the soil into such tiny particles that it is almost impossible to get them out of the garment.

Evolutionary Law?

Mellorism is the belief that the improvement of the world by human effort is not only possible, but that such improvement is a law of evolution. The term was first used by the novelist, George Elliot.

Andorra Self Governed but Not Real Republic.

Andorra is not exactly a republic because it is compelled to pay annual dues to the government of France and the Spanish bishop of Urgel. The little country is an autonomous, semi-independent state. It consists of six parishes in the diocese of the Spanish bishop of Urgel. It is in the valleys of the eastern Pyrenees between France and Spain. Within its 191 square miles of territory, 5,000 people live, one-fifth of them in the capital city, Andorra. The altitude of the country varies from about 6,000 feet to about 10,000 feet. The chief occupation is the cultivation of tobacco. The story is told that Charlemagne rewarded the country for its help during his campaigns against the Moors by declaring it independent. In those days, similar independence was enjoyed by a number of groups in the Pyrenees. France and the Spanish bishop appoint two civil judges to work together. Catalan is the language spoken. French and Spanish currency are both in use. French influence dominates the state.

Man's Small Wants.

"Man wants but little here below." In a very real sense this declaration of the poet is true. Every literary worker and every scholar tries to have a library close at hand. He gathers many books, which seem to him to be virtually indispensable to the prosecution of his professional work. And yet the majority of such students consists of a few books. When we come to sift our wants, we find that they center on very few things. Our discontent and dissatisfaction come largely from our imagination. We imagine that we have many obstacles and difficulties which have no existence in reality. Could we realize how little we absolutely need, and do, in fact, voluntarily get along with, we should save ourselves a vast amount of harmful worry.—Exchange.

Method in "Gibberish."

When we utter the word "gibberish" we allude to Arabian alphabet of about the year 800 named Geber, who spoke an unintelligible jargon in order to protect himself against prosecution for heresy.
