Tree Might Be Useful In Fight Against Crow
Perhaps if authorities in town where the starting has been cleared a nuisance would plant a few trees of the species Pisonia brunnea in the areas frequented by these birds a part of their problem would be solved. This tree is known to the natives of New Zealand, its native home, as the "bird-eating tree."

Ordinarily only small birds are victims, but recently a specimen in the garden of J. Wheeler at New Plymouth, N. Z., is reported to have captured a morepart, a species of owl, which is said to be the largest bird ever trapped by one of these trees.

The "bird-eating" tree has seeds about an inch long that grow in clusters and are covered with a heavy gum. When small birds fly into this tree and their feathers come into contact with the seed pods they are quite likely to be held fast until they are overcome by exhaustion in their efforts to escape. The tree in Mr. Wheeler's garden is said to have trapped hundreds of small birds in this way.

Conditions That Affect Human Eye Injurious
Too long hours of continuous use of the eyes should be avoided by a rest at intervals, if only for a few minutes, at which time they can be benefited by being bathed with ordinary cold water from the faucet, Dr. Sol. Rosenblatt explained in "Eye Hygiene and Heat," an article appearing in Hygiene, the Health Magazine.

It is the heat that is generated over a long period by excessive use of the eyes that causes the eyes to become tired. Heat affects the eyes in numerous ways. Doctor Rosenblatt explained. The heat generated by excessive use of the eyes over long hours, added to the ordinary body heat; the heat of fever repeated over a period of years; the heat of brilliant sunlight or too intense artificial light, and the heat of furnaces over a period of time are detrimental to the function of the eye.

Nature provides a safeguard in a manner somewhat similar to that of the water-cooled motor. Transpiration of the eye, and the circulation of the eye, and the anterior surface of the eye is bathed with fluid coming down from the tear gland above the eye. The peculiar reciprocal function of the eye requires transparency, and excessive heat destroys that quality; the loss of transparency is fatal to the function of that special organ, even though its form and strength are fully regained.

Half the homes of America are owned by men making less than $299 annually, it is said.

Greatness Linked With Cause They Stood For
There are two kinds of great personalities. Some men and women by the sheer brilliance of their nature, soon distinguished themselves as geniuses, as Michelangelo was in painting or Einstein in science.

There is, however, another kind of powerful personality open to all of us. We can be interested in something greater than ourselves. We can identify ourselves with it, and stand for it. The more one studies the biographies of men like Washington and Lincoln, of women like Florence Nightingale, Dorothy Dix and Jane Addams, the more one feels that so far as individual brilliance is concerned they might crowd what most of all gives them distinction is that they found something in their generation worth while standing for, identified themselves with a cause greater than themselves, and became so representative of it that when you think of it you think of them.—Harry Emerson Fosdick in Physical Culture Magazine.

On Colonial Highways.
An important part of the pageantry of the highway, as described by Marlon Nicoll Rawson in her book, "From Here to Yonder," a pantography of early trails and highway life, is the peddler with his stock in trade of pewter, woodens, tinware, baskets, brooms, brushes.

And now and then we came upon a "burying lot." A single stone of two divisions commemorates the joining in death as in life of the husband and wife, but with the husband's half higher to show his superior position. Others carry biographical sketches, lists of descendants, ages, grave-stone, subtypes, verses. This grave-stone inscription stops us. "I expected this but not so soon."

World's Most Modern Farm
The most up-to-date farm in the world is located on the border of Surrey and Sussex, in England. The 600 acres contained in this farm are owned by a syndicate of three men. Electricity is put to no fewer than 67 uses on the amazing farm. Each beehive has a chamber electrically warmed; horses and ponies are groomed by means of electrically-operated devices; milking, incubating, hay-drying, insect destruction, and plowing are all done by electricity.

Lives of Toads and Frogs
Toads and frogs may live for a number of years if they manage to escape their natural enemies and remain in suitable environment. There is a well-authenticated case of a toad which lived for thirty-six years and was accidentally killed. The common frog sometimes requires from four to five years to mature in the North, and barring accidents which are usual in the natural state, would probably live ten or twelve years.

"Fisherman's Ring"
A ring traditionally said to have been worn by St. Peter and still worn by the pope on high ceremonial occasions is known as the Fisherman's ring. "The Fisherman's ring is the title of the pope, says the New Catholic dictionary, "because most of the apostles were fishermen. Our Lord said he would make them fishers of men (Luke 5); this term designates especially their chief, Peter and his successor. The papal ring seal is that of the fisherman."

Important Questions
It is never too soon nor never too late to press home on ourselves questions like the following: "What spirit dwells in my heart? What good have I been doing? What works of love have I done? What deeds of charity have I performed? What fruits of the spirit, what evidence of love, have I shown? We must answer these questions soon, or they will press upon us when our hearts and reflect upon them?—Exchange.

Swimming Under Water
The distance which a person may swim under water varies as to conditions. Probably an average swimmer in a pool can swim 30 feet under water. M. Paulquin in Paris, France, on November 3, 1912, remained under water 6 minutes 20 4/5 seconds. Jack Trivilla of Avalon, Calif., swam under water 128.41 yards in 2 minutes 13.55 seconds at the Salt Wateratorium in Seattle, Wash., July 25, 1912.

According to science, a butterfly eats practically nothing. Not so with those human butterflies the boys take out to dinner.—Florida Times Union.

Grasses Suggested For Late Plantings
Substitutes Named to Replace Hay That Has Winter Killed.

Many Lane county farmers are wondering what they can plant in April or during May that will make hay or other types of feed for livestock. Winter killing of vetch and oats, red clover and other crops planted for hay made much reseeded necessary, and the late spring rains delay planting until many farmers will not be able to plant oats, wheat or barley for hay as planned.

County Agent Fletcher says that there is so little difference in the feeding value of hay made from vetch, oats or barley that Lane county farmers should sow the kind of grain from which they can get the heaviest tonnage. Oats are generally preferred by dairymen for hay, but wheat that is cut in the milk stage makes a very satisfactory food for dairy cows and headless barley also makes good hay when cut early.

Where farmers have land that cannot be prepared in time for any plant, Sudan grass, millet or corn to good advantage. Sudan grass makes fair hay and good pasture when planted after the land warms up well, which is usually after the middle of May. Millet can be planted about the 15th to 20th of May and will grow on land that is a little too wet for Sudan grass. Recommended varieties of millet are Hungarian, Siberian and common.

Most persons prefer Sudan grass to millet as the hay is, on the average, more palatable. Millet, however, has slightly more protein than Sudan grass, grows faster on colder land, the hay cures faster and is probably the better of the two on poorer soil. In determining which of these crops to grow, the farmer should determine the purpose for which he wishes to use the crop, that is whether for pasture or for hay, and plant accordingly.

If suitable summer pasture can be provided, the hay shortage will be lessened to some extent and better milk production obtained. Winter wheat planted now at the rate of one and one-half bushels per acre will make satisfactory summer pasture. Rye is better for this purpose than wheat because it makes more winter weather and is not so susceptible to rust. Chain pastures should be cross-fenced and fed in rotation. More detailed information in regard to forage crops for late planting may be obtained from the county agent.
