A mystery of the great American home is how a daughter who is too tired to wash the supper dishes nevertheless has plenty of energy to go out and dance until 2 a. m.— Eugene Register-Guard.

Yes, and how she will grow about the house being cold but claim she was warm as toast wearing silk stockings on her legs and not much more anywhere else sitting out in a car with her sweetie until the wee sma' hours.

We can't say that we like the yellow license tags that Secretary Hoss has provided for us this year. Maybe that's all we can expect for $5, but we are wondering when they will be like next year when $5 will pay for an entire year.

Physicians may now prescribe as much whisky as a patient needs and as frequently as he needs it. Undoubtedly chronic cases of illness will become prevalent.

The viewpoint of the world changes rapidly. A business man in need of an hour or so of recreation no longer has to sneak out to the golf course.

Scientists have provided us with a machine for weighing atoms. Some men could be weighed on it with all their clothes on.

Advice On Measures

The hour again approaches for the voters of Oregon to express their views upon various measures. July 14, date of the special election, is just a week away, and voters should by this time be making up their minds how they are going to cast their ballots. The idea of the initiative and referendum law is that voters shall study the measures presented to them, read the arguments pro and con in the voters' pamphlet and reach their own conclusions, but the Sentinel will follow its usual practice of briefly reviewing the several proposed pieces of popular legislation.

Four measures, sales tax, national and state prohibition repeal and grange power bonds probably are the measures there, there is the greatest interest, but all will be taken up in the order in which they will appear upon the ballot.

300-301—National prohibition amendment. Repeals the famous eighteenth amendment, the national constitution. Repeal will be inoperative until same action is taken by other states as required by the national constitution. Favorable vote on this amendment is in favor of transportation or importation of liquor into any state where state laws do not forbid same. States would provide regulatory measures. Advice on this measure would be useless. Every voter knows whether or not he is in favor of bringing back hard liquor.

302-303—Soldiers' and sailors' bonus amendment, submitted by legislature. Provides that state shall pay no more cash bonuses and that no bonus loans shall be made to world war veterans after June 30, 1933. It is necessary to set a date for discontinuing the same. The state has been eminently fair to its veterans and the American Legion is understood to be agreeable to adoption of this amendment. It also carries provision for refunding bonds which may be necessary in cleaning up bonus loans. Vote 302 Yes.

304-305—County manager form of government constitutional amendment, referred by the legislature. Provides that after legislature passes a law making provisions therefor, counties, upon vote of the people, may adopt form of government whereby all clerical, administrative and police duties would be vested in a county board of supervisors. The offices of county clerk, treasurer, sheriff, coroner, surveyor, county judge and county commissioner would be abolished. School superintendent and assessor seem not to be abolished. The Sentinel is not sold on this idea, but as voters of a county would make the final decision, little harm may come from adoption of the amendment. The measure is too indefinite and there is no demand for it. Vote 305 No.

306-307—Prosecution by information and grand jury modification amendment, referred by the legislature. The proposed amendment is an economy measure aimed to reduce the expense of prosecuting criminals. Oregon now requires indictment by a grand jury and this amendment is to make it possible to bring an alleged criminal to trial on information in the hands of the district attorney, although not eliminating the grand jury system. The criminal would lose none of his rights. Anything to save government expense these days should be popular. Vote 306 Yes.

308-309—Debt and taxation limitations for municipal corporations amendment, referred by the legislature. Requires a two-thirds vote on all new bonds issued by any municipal corporation in cases where a vote by the people is necessary. In the opinion of the Sentinel there should be a halt to such bond issues. Bonds, which may run for a generation, should not be voted by a bare majority of the comparatively small number of voters that usually go to the polls for special elections. Bonds to refund present indebtedness would not be affected by amendment. Hold down bond issues. Vote 308 Yes.

310-311—State power fund bonds measure, referred by the legislature. Provides for issuance of $100,000,000 in bonds as the first step toward putting the state into the power business. Those who wish to put the state into the power business, and eventually spend many hundreds of thousands of dollars to do so, will vote for this measure.

Those who oppose the entrance of the state into the power business at this time, with the taxpayer taking the chance as to whether the business will pay expenses, will vote against the measure. In the opinion of The Sentinel the voter should swat every new proposed bond issue that comes up at this time. Vote 311 No.

312-313—Sales tax bill, referred by the legislature. Object is to replace property tax with a two per cent sales tax. Already thoroughly discussed in columns of the Sentinel. While The Sentinel believes the tax doomed to defeat, it nevertheless favors the bill because it would bring real relief to property. However, a large proportion of those who would be benefited are opposing the bill. The Sentinel believes it pays less taxes under the property tax than it would under sales tax. The family spending $50 a month for general expenses, if all the tax were passed along by the merchant, would pay a sales tax of $12 a year, but all of the tax can be passed along. All receipts from sales tax would go to relieve property except the small amount required for administration. Vote 312 Yes.

314-315—Repeal of prohibition amendment to the constitution of Oregon, proposed by initiative petition. Legislature refused to refer. Repeals prohibition amendment of state of Oregon. People already have repealed law that made amendment effective, so that amendment is now deadwood on statute books and does neither harm nor good. Each voter knows whether or not he wishes all prohibition repealed. The bill is a no-no. No advice is necessary.

316-317—Oleomargarine tax bill, passed by legislature and referred by referendum petition. Voters have several times turned down the measure. The argument for the tax is that it is an aid to the dairy industry. There are two sides to the question, however, and many who use oleo believe that the tax deals them an unfair blow. The referendum was invoked by the oleo manufacturers. Those who wish arbitrarily to help the dairy industry will vote for the tax. Those whose sentiments are apposed to by the demand that the poor man's butter should not be taxed any more than any other article of food will vote against the proposed tax.

318-319—Grange power bill, enacted by the legislature and referred by referendum of the people. This is further legislation putting the state in the power business. Those who wish to take that chance will vote for the bill. Those who fear bond issues and wastage of state money will vote against this additional legislation. However, the power interests considered this bill the mildest one presented to the recent legislature and made no fight against it, feeling that the people demanded this kind of legislation.

Western Sections Grow Cheap Hops
Competition Drove Industry From State of New York, Professor Says.

By Prof. H. H. Wheeler, New York State College of Agriculture, Cornell University.

Western competition drove hops from New York state and will continue to hinder the Empire state hop yards. The decline in the New York acreage from 1889 to 1909 was from 27,332 to 12,023 acres, while the gain in Oregon was from 15,433 acres to 21,770 and in California from 6,890 to 8,291 acres. The main reason for the westward trek was that while New York growers harvested 628 pounds of hops to the acre, California growers harvested 1,361 pounds. Washington, 1,474 pounds, and Oregon 674 pounds. Nearly 20,000,000 pounds of hops were grown in the United States in 1932, enough for the brewing of 40,000,000 barrels of beer. Exports in 1910 were nearly 8,000,000 pounds; from 1925 to 1929, 12,000,000 pounds, on the average, and in 1932, the exports decreased to six and a half million pounds. In the meanwhile English and continental growers have increased the plantings. It is a question if foreign markets are closed, whether domestic hop consumption can absorb the United States crop at paying prices.

Some New York growers who know the hop growing business, who have good land and get high yields may make profits. The inexperienced grower needs to learn how to grow hops, to choose varieties, control diseases, grow quality crops, and know the market.

The first cost in hop growing is the roots. Since the roots are propagated by cuttings, and each cutting yields about the same as its parent, some assurance is needed that the roots are from high-yielding plants. Yields from individual vines may vary a half pound to eighteen pounds of hops. No crop would be harvested the first season, a partial crop the second season, and the first full crop would be harvested in 1935 from the year's plantings.

New York state growers are familiar with powdery mildew, or blight, which formerly attacked the crop and which can be controlled. Newer plantings will probably be attacked by another mildew which does more damage and is more difficult to control than powdery mildew. The newer, downy mildew has long troubled European growers and was found in New York state in 1928. California growers have comparatively little damage from the downy type.

Says Ferrous Sulphate Cure for Anemic Pigs
Even the squeal of an anemic sucking pig indicates that the pig is sick, according to John P. Williams of the New York State College of Agriculture. The disease, he says, attacks sucking pigs that are confined and cannot get iron from the soil or from fresh vegetation. The confined pigs may become anemic when about two or four weeks old and the most seriously affected pigs before weaning time.

Normal pigs, when about two or four weeks old, are vigorous, active, plump, firm-fleshed, and have sleek coats. The anemic pigs are listless, lack vigor, and are soft and flabby. As the disease progresses, the pig is thin, the legs get weak and crooked, the skin and mucous membrane become pale, and even the squeal lacks the clearness of the healthy pig.

Three years' test at the Cornell university experiment station show that one-third of a teaspoonful of a ferrous sulphate solution given internally as a drench once a week prevents the disease.

Bees and Clover
Bees apparently have a great liking for sweet clover and sometimes there is evidence that they leave alsike clover and white clover to work on sweet clover, but where all three clovers are abundant and all yield well, the flavor of the incoming nectar is usually that of white clover and alsike clover until the bloom of these plants begins to wane, then the bees turn to sweet clover. In exceptional seasons when white clover or alsike continues yielding through the blooming period of sweet clover, meager pollination of sweet clover might be expected. Red clover is used only when other clovers fall and under such conditions the red clover is well pollinated. The value of bees in the pollination of red clover must therefore depend to some extent at least upon whether the other clovers are yielding at the same time.

Garden Tools Needed
Cultivation in the garden of 1,000 square feet or less can be accomplished easily with the garden rake and hoe. For gardens up to 10,000 square feet, the wheel hoe is a desirable tool. For larger gardens, a one-horse cultivator, equipped with small shovels to prevent excessive riding, is very satisfactory. Garden tractors with cultivator attachments are used to a considerable extent where horse power is not available. The large farm garden can be worked with regular equipment.

Historic American Fleet
In all there were 16 battleships, including the Connecticut, Illinois, Oregon, Scorpion and Celtic, in the fleet that took the world cruise in Roosevelt's administration. The officers and crew numbered 12,000. They sailed from Hampton Roads, December 15, 1907, and returned to Hampton Roads February 22, 1909. They went by the way of New Zealand, Australia, the Philippines, China, and Japan, and returned by the Suez canal. The distance traveled was about 42,227 miles.
