Look in the Egg Basket for Breeding Results

Every hen and pullet on Washington, Oregon and Idaho farms produced an average of 107 eggs in 1932. Hens and pullets on Ohio, Iowa and Nebraska farms (to pick three other states at random) produced a yearly average of only 81 eggs. Why did Pacific Northwest hens contribute to the egg check so much more liberally than their eastern sisters? "Better breeding, feeding methods and climate," answer poultrymen.

Note that better breeding leads the list of success factors.

Royalty of the poultry world—chickens, turkeys, geese and ducks—highest producers in their classes—will be exhibited at Pacific International Livestock Exposition in Portland, October 21-28. See these exhibits. Hear poultrymen discuss the latest methods for making poultry pay.

To everyone this great exposition offers a liberal education and a wealth of entertainment features, including a colorful Rodeo and Horse Show. We urge you to attend if possible, and assure you of the cooperation of this bank in every legitimate endeavor.

Electricity has taken the "work" out of housework in many homes. An electric range does the cooking automatically in the absence of the cook... an electric refrigerator preserves perishable foods in cold storage and freezes ice cubes and desserts... a ventilating fan removes objectionable odors and keeps the air clean and healthful... an attractive, accurate, electric kitchen clock keeps the housewife on time for appointments... a radio loudspeaker, set into the kitchen wall and connected to the radio in the living room furnishes the morning household radio features... the electric food mixer makes play of preparing salad dressings, desserts and foods of all kinds... the kitchen sink contains an electric dish washer built in as a part of the sink itself... over sink, work table, range and refrigerator a shaded light is installed and adequate room illumination from a central fixture keeps the modern kitchen cheerful and bright.
