The Talk Test

You aren't really old until you lose interest in a conversation the moment the other fellow begins to talk.—Schenectady Gazette.

MYSTERY MECHANICAL MAN TO BE HERE TODAY

The normal man yawns and exclaims, "There ain't nothing can surprise me."

Just the same this worldly wise man will find it difficult to explain the young chap who is going to be wandering around the streets of Cottage Grove this (Thursday) afternoon.

Mr.—shall he be called a man or just a kid?—looks like a man and some wife may say he's smarter than the average man, but no matter.

The Golden West coffee people call him, or it, the Mystery Mechanical Man.

Today at The Sentinel office at 4 p. m. and you'll see things you didn't believe possible. He will actually write "want ad" with his own hands. He will then visit various stores of the city.

How this creation drives a car plays golf, writes want ads and does many other things will mystify all who see it perform. His appearance is much improved over the first robots and his work is much better. Mrs. Kerna are said to look like those of a banker when one is trying to make a loan he is not justified in asking for—they don't move, look glassy, hard, etc.

The robot will have a busy afternoon and all will have a chance to test the feeling of the brother who went to the circus and saw the giraffe for the first time.

An Underground Ocean

Scientists believe that below a depth of six miles in the crust of the earth there are no pores or cavities in which water could collect.

For this reason it is believed that the underground waters of the earth are all above that level. It is estimated that the total quantity of underground water in the crust of the earth measures about 565,000,000 cubic yards, or nearly one-third the amount of water in the oceans.—Washington Star.

Gorilla Mopes

The gorilla, largest of the anthropoids, mopes when taken from his jungles. In fact, he mopes "even unto death." The gorilla, as compared to the chimpanzee and orangutan, is remarkably slow in adaptation, originality and insight. The gibbon is the smallest and most primitive of the four apes.

Bats Have "Homing Instinct"

Like domesticated pigeons, bats have a "homing instinct," as has been proved by tagging them, the scientists tell us. That is the reason why they are so hard to get rid of once they have taken up their abode in a house.

"Relieved"

There is considerable misuse of the word "relieved." A man may be relieved of an aching tooth, but when his pocketbook is snatched away he feels no sense of relief whatever.—Pasadena Post.

Most Uncomfortable Man

"When you're talkin' 'bout taxes," said Uncle Eben, "I kin say fum experience dat de most uncomfortable man is de one dat's so pore he don't have to pay none at all."

Love of Beasts Pronounced

There is in the animal all there is in man. In a smaller, more humble, more pure, more innocent, more visible guise. Among all our sentiments, there is none more human than the love of beasts.

Garden

Pine boughs threaded bright with stars,
Windows all aglow—
And happy people hurrying
Along a street of snow.
A silver bell-a-swing with song,
Tall tapers burning bright—
And boys and girls keeping faith,
"Santa comes tonight!"
Ann Penway

Fir Trees.

Little green, green fir trees,
Trooping down the headlands
Where the old sea tugs and seethes
At the farthest ledges—
Little bristling fir trees
No one trims your branches;
Woodsmen with their axes sharp,
Always pass you by.
Never shall you tower
Like your inland neighbors;
You the wind and sea have kept
Small as Gypsy children,
Shaggy-haired and shy,
Crowding close together
Wrapt in cloaks of tattered green
Your sharp brown arms poke through—
Little sea-warded fir trees
Luckier than your fellows,
Young as waves and fairies are,
And every wise small star.
Rachel Field.
