We would be merely biting off our noses to spite our faces to refuse them the money necessary to continue their operation.
 This would be to the age where he would not be personally much inconvenienced by the lack of schools, but our interest in the schools can not be merely a personal one, but a public one. The welfare of our neighbors, of our city, of our county, of our state, of our nation to consider. That interest says that the sales tax is a necessity to tide us over the present emergency until such time as it will be a relief to the overburdened owner of property.
 Every person who benefits by the schools should pay something for their support. The sales tax would bring that about.

BOOZE.
 The Sentinel can not be accused of being either fanatically dry or fanatically wet. It doesn't believe that the experiment with prohibition was successful and it doesn't believe that the return to booze is going to be a howling success. It believes that we would be better off if some law were enacted, not by the legislature but by the people, to be voted upon at the May primaries.
 Those who intend to oppose the tax should sign the petitions, but those who favor the tax should positively refuse to affix their names to the petitions that would put the measure on the ballot. If sufficient names are not secured, the tax law will go into effect, and there is no sound reason why those who favor the tax should help the other side by signing the petitions. On the other hand, those who are certain they are opposed to the tax, and are willing to accept the consequences to our schools in case this tax law should be defeated, should make it a point to get their names on petitions. There is no way to defeat the tax except by signing the petitions that give the people a chance to vote.
 However, before a person decides that he is opposed to the tax, he should ask himself what other method there is to get the schools kept in operation. No other workable plan has been suggested. Taxation of property for the purpose of breaking down income taxes won't do it.
 This fact should also be borne in mind: whatever is produced by the sales tax is to be deducted from the tax on property that would be levied for the ensuing year. There are no ifs, ands, or buts about it. It must be done. Also this is only a brief experiment and the law automatically dies unless reenacted by the legislature in 1935.
 There are some who say the schools are entitled to no more than they can get from property tax, that they have been extravagant and are entitled to no sympathy. By this same yardstick, those of us who are complaining about the depression are entitled to no sympathy. We, too, were extravagant in years gone by. We have learned that we can live comfortably on a small part of what we formerly had. We have cut our expenses because we have been forced to do so. So have the schools. It may have been a good thing for all of us to be forced to cut our extravagances, but that is now beside the point so far as our schools are concerned. We were parties to their former expenditures. We wanted schools just as good as anyone else had, and we paid the bill.
 Now we are in danger of having no schools at all in many districts and shortened school terms in such districts as Cottage Grove. There is no hokey about this. Many schools have already closed.
 This may not be material, but during the years that it is said our schools were extravagant, school teachers were not getting salaries comparable with salaries of others with like or less qualifications were receiving. Many school principals did not receive more than $150 to $200 a month, while owners of many small businesses were spending more than that. While many sawmill employees were receiving higher wages than that.
 The Sentinel has criticized our schools at various times, but they are our schools and they are entitled to a fair deal. Besides that

Garden Club SOCIETY
 Some of us who received plants for Christmas may be wishing we knew how to care for them so that we might enjoy them as long as possible. Following are some hints from an article by Grace Tabor:
 "Lack of fresh air, improper drainage and improper watering are the usual causes of failure.
 Ventilate the room two or three times daily or remove the plants for ten minutes twice daily to a room where fresh air may be admitted freely without lowering the temperature below 50 degrees and always put the plants in a well ventilated room for the night.
 Elevate the pots at least half an inch from drainage saucers in which they stand to insure freedom from water standing in the earth about the roots. An excellent way to elevate them thus is to fill the saucer with coarse sand or fine gravel and stand the pot on the water.
 Water as often as the surface of the soil becomes dry enough to show incipient cracks, but before the cracks open.
 Poinsettia is perhaps the most popular of Christmas plants. It is native to the moist heat of tropical America and therefore likes moisture in the air as well as at its roots. It will thrive in a warm room, but it will not stand a dry atmosphere. It must never be chilled. This causes it to drop its leaves. Keep a pan of water on the radiator or other heat near it, spray it and the air around it once or twice daily if possible. A ten cent sprayer is fine for this. Keep the night temperature of never less than 60 degrees.
 Cinerarias love a cool moist atmosphere. If you can arrange to keep them as cool as 45 degrees at night and 55 to 60 degrees during the day, so much the better. If not, come as near as possible and ventilate often and thoroughly. Free air circulation is very important for them.
 Calceolarias need practically the same care.
 The plants need exposure to sunlight but in a cool room is ideal. In temperatures ranging from 50 to 60 degrees, or 60 to 90 degrees, this will bloom all winter, while in warm atmosphere it will languish.
 Primroses thrive on night temperatures of 45 to 50 degrees and prefer the coolest place you can give them during the day, with full sun. They are greatly injured if permitted to dry out even slightly, so water carefully and freely."

 Petitions are likely to be in circulation shortly asking that the sales tax enacted by the recent legislature be referred to the people, to be voted upon at the May primaries.
