A "suspicion" of moonshine. At any rate a young woman drinking a cocktail doesn't make a picture worth admiring.
This was the first time a reader has asked The Sentinel to correct English used in the Oregonian, which, as a matter of fact, is usually above reproach, therefore it was rather odd that a day later another reader of both papers should call attention to the use of "people" in the Oregonian. In the sense in which it was used twice in the same issue the word referred to a few persons. This usage is not common on editorial pages of such papers as the Oregonian, the word being usually reserved to describe the people of a city, commonwealth or nation. However, it undoubtedly is correct when used in the manner criticized, even though it doesn't seem to comply with the niceties of the language. Inasmuch as The Sentinel frequently speaks of the young people of a church or society, it is not in a position to criticize.

NO SYMPATHY.
A large portion of the commotion among the unemployed group in Eugene has arisen over the discharge of a man who has been a resident of the United States for 23 years without making any effort to become a citizen. He is an example of those who wish to go through life without assuming any responsibilities, but when tough times come such persons believe that those who have assumed the responsibilities should have everything fixed so that those who have shirked may be adequately cared for.
Of course, even such fellows as this can't be allowed to starve, but they are entitled to no sympathy when they are scratched off CWA payrolls. America is for Americans, and those who don't care to become citizens are perfectly welcome to leave for some other country that suits them better. We have no need for the benefits of our government without making an effort to become a citizen thereunder.

DEBTS, PROSPERITY.
One thing that is going steadily on during the depression is the reduction of the debt loads of cities, states, or business enterprises of individuals. At the present rate of retirement, it is easy to believe that if no new indebtedness were incurred in ten years we should be practically out of the hole, with the possible exception of the national government, which is bearing a lot of the burdens for the rest of us these days, for which we shall pay later.
The necessity of reducing the debt load is indicated by the following figures. The combined debts of the state of Oregon and its subdivisions approximate $1,000,000,000. The combined interest load of the state and all its subdivisions, based on an average interest rate of 5% per cent, or approximately $1,000,000 a year, or approximately $1 a month for every man, woman and child in the state. If we could be relieved of our debts overnight, with payment to those to whom they are due, we should have rampant prosperity the next morning.
When those of us now grown were kids we were told that the important thing in life was the three R's—reading, riting and rithmetic. Nowadays the informed person must be familiar with the entire alphabet, for we have government not only by men of letters but by the letters themselves. We have the AAA, two CCCs, the CWA, the PWA, the PRA, the NRA, the HOLC, the ECNR, the FERA, the SAE, the TVA, the FSHC and a dozen more. Probably no official in Washington can name all of them.
The Portland Spectator complains, referring to NRA: "No natural law can be set aside or repealed." If the Spectator editor were supporting the democratic administration, he would know that the whole NRA movement is not to set aside natural laws, but to make conditions such that

OREGONIAN'S ENGLISH.
A reader of The Sentinel, as well as of the Oregonian, has called The Sentinel's attention to the following which appeared in a recent issue of the Oregonian: "In the face of such palpable unauthenticity one is forced to suspicion that the cocktail the young woman in the picture was taking was made with a moonshine base in a shaker."
The reader asked whether or not that use of "suspicion" was correct.
The dictionary says such use is colloquial or obsolete, but that may still leave it good enough usage for daily newspapers. County weeklies have to be more careful for their readers are more select and more discriminating in their English than readers of metropolitan newspapers.
Speaking of this cocktail the young woman was taking, one might suspect that there was only

"You would have paid for a telephone!"
Out to drugstore or market in the rain—and something needlessly ruined.
A telephone in your home is a low-priced form of clothing and health insurance. It is a link with business, with friends, with all the protective forces of a great city.
A telephone does so much, and costs so little, that it simply does not pay to be without it.
