ADDITIONAL 100, 20c

Often someone desires to send out a small number of postal cards, or small circulars, each to have the same reading matter. The work of typewriting requires considerable time, yet the person desiring to make the mailing does not believe the cost of printing is warranted. It is to meet this situation that The Sentinel has equipped itself to produce small mimeographed forms.

When customer furnishes stock and prepares stencil, 100 will be produced for 50 cents, and usually may be delivered a few minutes after order is placed. When The Sentinel prepares the stencil, or furnishes paper, a slight extra charge will be made. Stencils may be purchased from The Sentinel at 10c each.

Additional quantities, stock furnished by customer, will be printed at the rate of 20 cents the 100.

Chance to Launch Vast "Work" Plan

Farmers Should Exchange Surplus Products for Needed Repairs.

By W. A. Foster, Rural Architect Specialist, University of Illinois, WNU Service.

With millions of dollars' worth of repairs needed on their buildings and with their products going begging for a market, farmers might well get together with the unemployed workmen of towns and cities on a "farm works project" that would be of mutual benefit to all.

Thinking Rightly About Business

MUCH thought is given to the question of business. For most people, supply seems to be dependent upon the state of business. If it is good, supply appears to be adequate; and this condition is thought to be an influence in helping the individual to live happily and to have good health. Seeing, then, that the state of one's business is believed to greatly contribute to one's sense of harmony, we should see the necessity of looking at this question from the right standpoint.

Some individuals look at this subject more hopefully than do some others. Many people are beginning to see that to take the stand that business is bad, and that it is going to get worse, is certainly the wrong way to think about it. Many have stopped using the word "depression," feeling that the continual use of it has a bad effect upon the general outlook.

Business is primarily mental. In fact, all human experience is the outward expression of a state of consciousness. Christian Science reveals God, infinite good, as the only Mind. If the individual accepts this fact, he can learn how to reject all wrong thoughts. The acceptance of God, infinite good, is the only Mind open his thought to receive the good and perfect ideas which come from God, divine Mind.

The only real business is the activity which comes from God. The one infinite, spiritual creation is always expressing the perfect activity which comes from the creator. Wonderfully uplifting is the realization of the truth set forth in this statement by Mary Baker Eddy: "Mind is the source of all movement, and there is no inertia to retard or check its perpetual and harmonious action" (Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures, p. 283). For several years the world has been accepting the general belief that something has interfered with harmonious activity; and both time and effort have been expended in trying to ascertain what is the trouble. One who accepts the fact that omnipotent Mind "is the source of all movement" can never believe in depression as real. Having gained the true idea of activity, one can refuse to accept the belief that any mortal supposition has interfered, or ever can interfere, with harmonious activity.

A business man might be told by several of his salesmen that they found sales very poor, and he might learn that someone in a similar line of business had failed. He might let anxiety and fear enter his thought. This, of course, would not be helpful. On the other hand, if he refused to accept wrong thoughts about business and held to the fact that real activity comes from divine Mind, and is always perfect, his affairs would improve; and to this extent he would help to improve conditions in general.

"Since harmonious activity comes from God, divine Mind, and the real man, the true selfhood of all, is the image and likeness of divine Mind, the real man's business is always good, and spiritual man is ever rejoicing in harmonious activity. The great Way-shower, Christ Jesus, recognized that spiritual man ever reflects God, for he said, 'The Son can do nothing of himself, but what he seeth the Father do: for what things soever he doeth, these also doeth the Son likewise.' One who accepts the true idea of activity is able to rise above the beliefs of fatigue, monotony, and worry; for the realization of the fact that man reflects divine Mind gives joyous strength, freedom, and expectancy of good.

Since business is in reality the activity which comes from God, divine Principle, fear, dishonesty, greed, selfishness, and lack of ability are no part of real business. This knowledge enables one to refuse to accept these fancies as having power to operate in his thought and affairs; and he sees instead honesty, efficiency, freedom, love, and joy. The realization of the truth brings one's human business into harmony with God's law, and destroys whatever is unlike good.—The Christian

Angler Fish Have Their Own Rod, Line and Bait

Angler fish have a miniature rod with line and bait attached to the top of the head. Found in the greatest depths worked with a trawl, many are small, but the chief part of their bodies is the mouth. They evidently obtain their food by waiting for some smaller creature to snap at the permanent "bait," which hangs temptingly at the end of their rod, for most of their other organs, such as fins, eyes, and tail, appear to be useless. But in a world darker than the darkest night how do they find their way to the bait?

On the other hand, says Tit-Bits Magazine, we find an angler fish developed in the opposite way. Its fins are well adapted for swimming, and the rod has dwindled, showing that the creature depends more and more upon its swimming powers for capturing food, so the rod and bait become smaller.

The sack-throated whiptail is hideous. One specimen was six feet in length, and had a body two feet long with a huge mouth, over which were a pair of pin-point eyes, the remainder of its length being a whip-like tail. Several specimens have been taken dead on the surface, their bodies each containing a fish practically the same size as the hunter. Live specimens have been obtained at a depth of 1,000 fathoms.

Trawls used at great depth are necessarily small, and the objects brought to the surface are, in consequence, not large, but it is probable that in those sinister depths there are other fish as huge as they are ugly.

Bronze Age Cemeteries in Circle Arrangement

Druidical circles, cromlechs or domings, depending on whether they are found in Britain, France or Scandinavia, are groups of three or more stone pillars, arranged in circular form when sufficient have been erected, and are believed to be cemeteries of the Bronze age. Often these stones are arranged in a large circle, with one or more smaller circles contained within the outer.

The largest circle found in Scotland is the group at Stennis, Orkney. There are 13 still standing, the largest being 14 feet tall. A moat 6 feet deep and 30 feet wide surrounds the stones. At Stonehenge on the plains of Salisbury, England, stands the greatest collection of the stones. However, a circle with stones 13 feet high and spaced 4 feet apart is the most extensive, while other circles and ovals are composed of stones in some cases 23 feet high. Altogether, there are 140 pillars in the layout.—Washington Star.

Strained With Human Hair
Great quantities of human hair were imported into this country up to a few years ago, to be used in the manufacture of hair nets to be worn by the American women. The hair came from China and Europe, but when the "bob" came into fashion the demand for hair nets declined to such an extent that the shipments almost reached the zero point. But the hair is still coming in limited quantities, especially the Chinese hair, for an entirely different use. It is used for straining oil in the refineries. This process takes place under pressure and all of the materials which have been generally made use of have been found to be unsatisfactory. They are often too frail or too costly.

Weight of Water
The weight of fresh water is about 62.4 pounds a cubic foot. According to the principle of Archimedes, the lifting effect on a submerged body is equal to the weight of the displaced liquid, and any object weighing more than 62.4 pounds a cubic foot will sink in fresh water. Sea water is somewhat denser than fresh water, owing to its salinity, weighing about 64 pounds a cubic foot at the surface, and about 69 pounds a cubic foot in the deepest known places. Any object weighing more than 69 pounds a cubic foot will sink to the bottom in such water.

Uncle Sam Paid France
France received from the United States all of the money which was borrowed during the time of the American Revolution. This debt was discharged between 1791 and 1795 by money borrowed in Holland. The latter debt was finally paid Holland in the early part of the Nineteenth century. The money borrowed from France was borrowed between the years 1778 and 1782. The interest on these loans was forgiven until 1783, and in fact little interest was paid until 1790.—Washington Star.

A Quiet English Village
Who says the English countryside is absolutely ruined? West Ashton, in Wiltshire, is proud of its simplicity. It has no railway station, no "pubs," no policemen, no crime and none but voluntary unemployment. There's a bus from the nearest town every other week. There are electric lights along the roads, in the church and on several large farms. The cottagers are content with oil lamps. There's no real estate office.

Discovery of Etching on Glass
The art of etching upon glass is said to have been discovered by a Nuremberg glass cutter when, by accident, a drop of aqua fortis fell upon the lens of his spectacles.

A Freeholder
A freeholder is one who holds a freehold estate as distinguished from a tenant holder. The term was brought to the American colonies from England.

Tree-Growing on Retired 3-A Land

Terms Provide Farmers May Plant for Woodlot, Windbreaks, Forest.

By L. E. Sawyer, Extension Forester, University of Illinois—WNU Service.

Growing trees on land contracted to the government through the AAA wheat and corn-hog adjustment programs will prove more advantageous to farmers in many sections than crops planted on the same ground.

On a large majority of farms, where corn-hog and wheat contracts are signed, the less productive land will be removed from cultivation. Under the terms of the contract, such land may be planted to trees for woodlot, windbreak or forest purposes. This is a decided advantage to some farmers. It gives them an opportunity to establish the long-needed protection without reducing the area of the farm that is available for cultivation.

In many cases this less productive land will grow trees to better advantage than it will grow farm crops, even under more normal conditions. In the future such tree plantings will yield valuable timber crops, or they will aid in the control of erosion, or both.

Christmas trees, ornamentals and nursery stock are not permitted under the contract, but if wet, bottom land is removed from cultivation, trees which will mature in 12 to 15 years can be planted. Where taxes and carrying charges are not too high, these trees will often return a larger income at the end of the rotation than the landowner would have received from average crops of corn and wheat on the same area. Thus, farmers may obtain reasonable returns in this manner from the contracted acres in addition to the government benefit payments.

All Legume Seed Will Be Scarce, Price High

Indications are that legume seed of all kinds for planting next spring will be scarce and higher in price. The regulations of the agricultural adjustment administration require that all land contracted to be removed from cultivation of crops under adjustment cannot be planted to competing cash crops. About the only thing these acres may be used for is soil-improving or erosion-preventing crops. Food and feed crops for home use may be grown, but feed crops used for fattening hogs for sale may not be planted. In other words, the contracted acreage cannot be used in whole or in part for the production, directly or indirectly, for sale of any nationally produced and distributed agricultural product during the time of the contract.

"Therefore," says Enos C. Blair, extension agronomist at North Carolina State college, "growers had best look to saving a good supply of all kinds of legume seed. Where velvet beans are grown farmers would do well to save enough seed for their own requirements."

In April, when the days are warm, spread the beans out in the sun on a sheet. After two days of exposure, most of the seed will have popped out of the pods. A few light blows with a stick will finish the job.

Longer Ears of Corn

For 80 years Jacob Sasa, an Iowa grower of prize corn, has been trying to add to the length of ears. His efforts have rewarded him with ears of the grain 10 inches in length, which is 3 inches longer than normal. He even produced some measuring 15 inches, and says the day does not far off when he will be able to show 18-inch corn. For planting, Sasa selects the kernels of his longest corn as seed.
