Diocletian's Palace Is Survival of Roman Epoch

The first of the great "show places" of the Dalmatian Riviera is Split (Spalato), a town of 30,000 inhabitants. The city has a history running back to the times of the Roman empire. It was the favorite residence of the Emperor Diocletian (himself a Dalmatian by birth), who built a magnificent palace there. This palace, with its baths and temples, is one of the most interesting survivals of the Roman period.

The palace is of rectangular form and is 216 meters long and 179 meters wide. It is entered by three gates, on the north by the Golden Gate (Porta Aurea), on the west by the Iron Gate (Porta Ferra) and on the east by the Silver Gate (Porta Argenta). Each of these gates is flanked by two original towers. There was yet another gate on the southern front, leading to the sea, and adorned with 50 columns, part of which is still to be seen. A quadrangular tower defended each corner of the palace.

The most beautiful portion of the building is the open peristyle, still serving as the vestibule of the mausoleum of the great emperor (now the Cathedral) and to the Temple of Jupiter (now the Baptistry). The classic beauty of these buildings and the decorative architecture of the Porta Aurea, the Loggia and the arcade of the southern facade and, last but not least, the marvelous subterranean construction, excite the admiration, not only of tourists, but also of engineers and architects.

Boats 3000 B. C. Were Constructed of Planks

Shipbuilding, says the Washington Star, is one of the most ancient of the arts. Egyptian drawings, dating probably from about 3000 B. C., show boats constructed of planks, having sails as well as oars. From ancient sculptures it appears that the ships of the Greeks and Romans were propelled by wind and oar and were built with keel, ribs and planking, strengthened crosswise by benches on which the rowers sat.

The Phoenicians were probably the most skillful mariners of ancient times, and at a very early period had developed a type of war galley. The Vikings of Norway used ships of considerable strength of frame, but very light draft. The European nations steadily improved in shipbuilding, and the oar was gradually superseded by the sail. Larger and speedier vessels were required for the development of commerce. The development of shipbuilding as a science, however, may be said to date from the middle of the Nineteenth century and to have been a direct result of the use of iron and steel in ship construction and the application of steam to propulsion.

Thieves Tip Farmer Off to Gold

Thieves unwittingly helped a farmer of Temesvar, Rumania, find a small fortune he never knew he possessed. When the farmer returned home one evening he found four men ransacking his house for a large sum of money which they declared was there. The farmer knew nothing of the treasure and the thieves were unable to find it. So they tied the man and one of his sons to a beam in the old barn and left. After much struggling the two freed themselves, but in doing so they pulled down the old beam, which proved to be rotten and hollow. Out tumbled 110 pieces of gold of Imperial Germany. They had been hidden there by the farmer's uncle, from whom he inherited the place.

The Solomons

The Solomons, which are situated about 900 miles northeast of Australia, are among the most remote of Pacific islands, yet, save for the Ladrones, and perhaps the Marshalls, they were the earliest found by Europeans. They were discovered, strangely, from Peru, where adventurers, thirsting for more gold, heard rumors of a continent close by to the west. Lost for 200 years, they were rediscovered in 1767.

Theater Seat Space Regulated

District of Columbia regulations require that all theaters or public buildings with fixed seats must allow a space not less than 2 feet 6 inches from back to back of chairs, with an aisle width of not less than 4 feet—this width to be increased with the increased size of the hall. Where there are no fixed seats, 8 square feet per person must be allotted.

Hemlock Spruce Is Tree Popular Along Highways

The hemlock, more properly the hemlock spruce, is one of the more beautiful, graceful evergreens of the northeastern United States. It is usually found in moist situations, such as the northern slopes of rock ridges and along the banks of streams, ponds and lakes. It is a somewhat common forest tree. A recently cut Pennsylvania giant was five hundred and sixty years old. There is nothing quite like the beauty of a grove of large hemlocks and, as a roadside tree, it is not without merit.

The hemlock has greater possibilities than suggested by the above. There are some seven recognized species in America, three having been introduced from the Far East, and two growing in the West or Northwest.

The Japanese hemlock is a graceful distinct species which does well in some states. The Chinese hemlock, a handsome, promising species and a closely related tree, is from the Province of Yunnan.

The Carolina hemlock ranges from the mountains of southwest Virginia to Georgia. It is considered a more desirable ornamental tree than our common hemlock. The Western hemlock occurs from southern Alaska to Idaho and California. It grows rapidly in a rich, humid soil, but does not do well in dry Eastern climate. The mountain hemlock is also Western and has much the same range as the preceding, except that it is more boreal in habit.—New York Herald-Tribune.

Thousands of Varieties of Apples Come and Go

It isn't known how many varieties of apples there are, but to quote L. H. Bailey, noted authority on apples, and editor of the Cyclopedia of American Horticulture, "Every seedling of the pomological apples is a new variety" . . . . "No one knows all the kinds that have been named and propagated, but they run into many thousands. No one book contains them all, although some of the manuals are voluminous. Varieties drop out of existence, being no longer propagated; new varieties come in."

T. Roosevelt a Church Man

Theodore Roosevelt was a member of the Dutch Reformed church. As a child he attended Sunday school and church service with his parents. The family home had "a strong religious atmosphere." The future Chief Magistrate made formal confession of faith before he entered college. Years later he said: "Church work and church attendance mean the cultivation of the habit of feeling some responsibility for others. I advocate a boy's joining in church work for the sake of showing his faith by his works." He taught a Sunday school class while himself but a student, and on more than one occasion was called upon to preach a sermon. In Washington Roosevelt attended the Grace Reformed church. At Oyster Bay he was a vestryman of Christ Episcopal church. He always sang the hymns and said the creed aloud.

Greece Had First Stamps

It appears that the Greeks invented the modern adhesive postage stamp nine years before the issuance of England's penny black, hitherto regarded as the first adhesive postage stamp, says the Detroit News.

Hitherto the stamp was only known on cover and among the few that have been found the earliest date was December 25, 1840.

That the stamp was in existence before 1840 is proved by the discovery among some old papers in Greece of a portion of a sheet, consisting of nine stamps, bearing the manuscript inscription on the back with the date May 2, 1831, and the signature of the governor of Poros, where the state printing works were situated at that date.

The Arab in the Desert

Deserts are not all barren wastes. Nor are they all empty spaces. Some are inhabited by familiar and unfamiliar creatures, and others are the haunts of an invisible and invincible race. To the Arab there are communities of spirits in the desert—spirits, good and evil, to comfort or distress, to rescue or annihilate. That is why, in his travels, he is a man of many moods, gay, pious, poetical, anecdotal, silent. That is why he sings, prays, recites poetry, tells of his exploits or makes his way through a maze of uncertainties in hushed apprehension.

First Bank Started

The first bank can be traced to ancient Rome, Greece, Egypt and Babylonia. In the modern sense of the term, the earliest bank is probably that of Barcelona in Spain, which was established in 1401. In America there was little banking before the adoption of the Constitution. The first bank was the Pennsylvania bank, which commenced business on the 17th of July, 1780.

MACKIN MAKES RECORD PORTLAND TRACK MEET

Cottage Grove's reputation for producing outstanding athletes was augmented Tuesday when Wayne Mackin lowered the record for the mile run in a state junior track and field meet held at Grant bowl in Portland. His time was 4:49.8.

Wood Veneers Known In Days of Pyramids

Wood veneer is not a modern method of using high priced woods, Robert H. Savage told the chamber of commerce at its evening dinner meeting Tuesday. "Furniture in which veneer has been used has been found in the pyramids of Egypt," Mr. Savage said. "Veneering as made it possible for persons of modest means to have furniture in which expensive woods are used. There is practically no solid furniture any more made of expensive woods, as veneer is recognized as better than the solid wood."

Mr. Savage showed samples of a large number of veneers from woods of the world, had on display a dozen pictures in which vari-colored woods were used to imitate painting and exhibited a number of articles made from burls and expensive woods.

Misses Evelyn Coiner and Betty Jacobsen gave a piano duet and Miss Lorraine Coiner gave a reading.
