LITTLE EFFORTS, BIG RESULTS.
 For twenty-three years of which this writer knows little has been intermittent talk in Cottage Grove of some kind of cooperative effort by growers and cooperators that would result in local producers supplying the local market, but until recent weeks has any action been taken that has had tangible results. Today we have growers organized and growers cooperating with them to put local products on the local market at prices fair to both producer and consumer.

The movement was sponsored by the chamber of commerce, but it is a brain child of the president of that body, who grew up with producers, is himself interested in agricultural pursuits and has given considerable thought to agricultural economics.

There never was a reason for the local market not being supplied by local producers except one that producers and distributors did not get together for the purpose. Distributors could depend upon produce when they wanted it in such quantities as they wanted. They could even depend upon it being of the quality demanded by the distributor's trade. In addition they could be certain that the person from whom they bought wouldn't go out and canvass the city offering to sell at prices that left the distributor holding the sack.

Under the present arrangement producers and distributors agree upon a fair price, with a very small margin for the distributor, and the price the producer will charge when selling direct to the consumer will be the same as that the distributors have agreed to charge. Producers also agree that quality shall be of the best. There are to be no second grade berries; the only products so far affected, but vegetables are to be included later.

This is an arrangement that should have been made a half century ago, and it has been made within a few weeks through intelligent direction and cooperation. Possibly we are overlooking many other things that we might easily do that would be a benefit to the city and the community. If this one effort is a success, and it seems that it is going to be, the chamber of commerce has justified its existence for many years without another constructive thing.

A new style religion, in which no hell is recognized, has been organized in Chicago. Of course, it is easy for a person living in Chicago to believe that a kind providence would impose no further punishment.

BOOZE BRINGS DEATH.
 A former Cottage Grove girl is a widow in Eugene because someone with too much booze got behind a steering wheel. The person responsible for the death of J. J. Jackson has not been apprehended, but we suspect he is a person who had a lot to say about personal liberties during the years he could not legally buy booze.

There may be some good logic in the belief of many that we can not legally stop a person from making a damphool of himself, but that only applies when he is not interfering with the rights of others. The fellow who fills up on booze and then tries to operate a motor car is interfering with the rights of all others using the highways and it would be legal to put such a person permanently in a place where he would no longer be a menace to anyone.

This newspaper never bragged very much about the success of prohibition, but it most certainly has seen no opportunity to point to legalized booze as better than such prohibition as we had.

This newspaper has never found fault with the person who imbibes alcoholic liquors temperately, but he might be better off to leave them alone entirely, just as it would be better for him to drink less coffee, to smoke fewer cigarettes, to get more sleep, or to discontinue various intemperate habits, but so long as he did not interfere with others or with other persons, we made no complaint. However, The Sentinel is only one of many liberal newspapers that are beginning to find fault with intemperate use in public places of alcoholic liquors. All newspapers are condemning the potential murderer who tanks up and gets behind the steering wheel.

No mercy should be shown the driver of the car who sent J. J. Jackson to his death, if that person is captured. If not captured, he by this time knows what sorrow his indiscretion has brought into several homes and will throughout his life carry a mental burden that may be worse than the punishment due him.

What the wets should do, if they would retain alcoholic liquors, is to demand some semblance of enforcement of temperance and decency in consumption of liquors.

Erecting magnificent tombstones to our departed wives and mothers, with beautiful and endearing inscriptions of love chiseled thereon, show a proper respect for the departed ones. The departed ones might still be scattering sunshine among us if words of love had been spoken and deeds of love performed while they were journeying through this vale of tears.

THE SENIORS LOOK AT LIFE.
 (Eugene Register-Guard.)
 Old folks got quite a job at this year's commencement exercises of Eugene high school. Instead of asking some more or less notable fogey to spout platitudes and apophthegms that may be worse than the good old-time custom of asking various members of the graduating class to give their views to the world. And how they did!

Those of us who are getting a bit gray in places may grin a bit. Magnanimously we may recall some of the florid high school orations of other years. And, in fact, twenty-five years from now, some of these orators may blurt as most of us blurt now when we come upon the souvenirs of early years.

Yet we must admit the youngsters are asking many questions which we cannot answer. We must plead guilty to many of their indictments. Most of us have been money grubbers. Most of the time we have been guided less by our hopes than by our fears. We have contributed little to the world's peace, and have failed to guard the roads to opportunity. There is much that we have failed to do.

The oncoming generation can and will do better. In fact, its protests against the many obvious wrongs and injustices are the echo of our own outcries. There is something very heartening in this youthful crusading zeal. These blunt questionings from the young indicate that our schools are being given to do what they are intended to do. Nevertheless, it needs to be pointed out that hoary age is entitled to ask some questions, too.

How well, young people, are you really equipped to do all these things you are so anxious to do? How sure are you of all these facts you think you know? Have

SOCIETY

The marriage of Miss Bertha Remington and Clay Gaidabini was solemnized Monday morning at 10 o'clock at the Christian parsonage with Rev. I. G. Shaw officiating. The couple were attended by Mrs. Elizabeth Gaidabini, mother of the groom, and Charles Remington, father of the bride. They left, following the ceremony, for points along the Columbia highway, going by way of the McKenzie highway. Upon their return they will be at home at Anlauf.

Mrs. T. C. Wheeler and Mrs. J. A. Merriman were joint hostesses Monday for the Past Matrons' club you learned to discount hearsay? Do you verify what you read? Do you skip lightly around those tasks which require thoroughness and accuracy? Most of us older ones have been guilty of a good deal of shallow thinking and slipshod doing. Do you also blurt it through?

If we were to make any prediction for the coming years, it is that the world is going to be more and more exacting in its requirements, especially of those who lead. Whether in politics or business or the arts, a sincere craftsmanship is the greatest need. Great things are waiting to be done. Man is only on the threshold of his universe. For those who have the skill and poise and daring there is going to be no lack of interesting work.

But the millennium will not be attained in one last rush. We are still on the long road up from the jungles. A few "parasangs" (as the forgotten Xenophon might say) for each generation constitute a pretty good march. Most of the time, mankind spends standing on his bootstraps, defying progress. He likes to live as he goes along, which after all is fairly good sense.

We oldsters who have helped devise this age of plenty are frankly puzzled as to the next step. So come on young 'uns, do your stuff.

at the home of the former. A desert luncheon was served at 1:30 and a business and social afternoon followed. The honor guests received a number of gifts and at a late hour refreshments were served. Two birthday cakes were featured at the refreshment hour. Guests included members of the Allen and Nichols families.

Mrs. A. W. Kime entertained Monday evening with a farewell party for her granddaughter, Betty Romaine, who left yesterday for her home in Portland. Betty attended school here this year and the guests included 15 girl and boy friends. The evening was spent with games and contests, after which delicious refreshments were served.

The Presbyterian ladies' aid will meet Wednesday in the church with Mrs. W. H. Daugherty as chairman.

Mrs. G. B. Pitcher was hostess last week for the LaComus club. A dessert course was served at 1:30 and a social afternoon followed. Sweetness in shades of pink were attractive decorations for the luncheon table. Miss Eunice Vandenburg was an additional guest. The club will meet next Tuesday at the home of Mrs. Mary VanDenburg.

Mr. and Mrs. D. A. Emerson entertained with a dinner Wednesday of last week for the teachers of the Central school. The occasion honored Miss Marlette Hamant, a member of the teaching staff here for a number of years, who has resigned. Additional guests were Mr. and Mrs. William Thum.
