Trustworthiness

LOYALTY has always been highly regarded as a virtue, whether it has been applied to family life, social organization, or religion. One of the most familiar exhortations to loyalty is given in the fifth commandment: "Honour thy father and thy mother." John the Baptist entertained and practiced a fine sense of spiritual loyalty when he said of Christ, Jesus, "He that cometh after me is mightier than I, whose shoes I am not worthy to bear."

Men and women in various stages of growth and progress have pledged their loyalty to their country and their flag, to righteous causes, and to many a system of medicine and religion. All this has been splendid and inspiring. But there is rightly only one true allegiance—that which we owe to God, divine Principle; and eventually everyone will acknowledge this, for it is the only one without equivocation the First and most important of the Commandments.

In the beloved literature of the Bible there is a clear moral in the life story told of Ruth. A grand illustration of the love of Ruth. Who that has been lonely, has met with reverses, or has experienced trouble in one way or another, such as error always is attempting to make us accept as real, has not longed and prayed for steadfast loyalty to such a cause as was expressed in Ruth's words to Naomi, "Whither thou goest, I will go; and where thou lodgest, I will lodge; thy people shall be my people, and thy God my God."

From a casual reading of the book of Ruth one might suppose that Ruth's loyalty was that of one near relative to another. The earnest student, however, studying the book profoundly to glean its spiritual meaning and take to heart its moral, will discern Ruth's unmistakable loyalty to God, divine Principle. She appears to have had to a remarkable degree a sense of trustfulness, confidence in God, which in turn made her trustworthy. This trustworthiness unfolded in rare fruitage. She was guided and protected every step of her way. She was protected from sin and from sinful gossip. Her loyalty to God prompted her loyalty first to her husband; then to Naomi, her mother-in-law; and afterwards to Boaz, the next of kin who, according to the Jewish custom, married her. Clearly her loyalty to God brought to her solace, comforting companionship, supply, contentment, and happiness.

Mary Baker Eddy presents a clarified definition of loyalty which she writes (Retrospection and Introspection, p. 50), "By loyalty in students I mean this,—allegiance to God, subordination of the human to the divine, steadfast justice, and strict adherence to divine Principle."

Mortals may be far from having demonstrated perfect obedience to the first two Commandments, but it must be admitted that through the earnest and conscientious endeavor to obey them, so far as he sees the light, the individual will demonstrate ever increasing loyalty to divine Principle. The reasoning is logical that loyalty to God means loyalty to His kingdom and to His ideas—the sons and daughters of God. Loyalty to Principle precludes disloyalty to honesty, goodness, purity, mercy, justice, and the like.

Subordination of the human to the divine at times may seem difficult, for the reason that it is predicated upon the willingness of the individual to surrender his dependence upon persons, upon selfish desire, human ambition, man-made plans. Mortals are often reluctant to part with the material things which, as they believe and have been taught for centuries, are essential to happiness. Beautifully Mrs. Eddy puts it in "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" (p. 516), "When we subordinate the false testimony of the corporeal senses to the facts of Science, we shall see this true likeness and reflection everywhere."

Justice and adherence to Truth and Love—proof of one's loyalty—follow naturally and necessarily upon loving and obeying the Commandments. And the rewards of such obedience, allegiance, loyalty, are manifold and of inestimable worth.
