Drouth Corn Not Likely to Hurt Farm Live Stock

There is little danger of poisoning live stock by feeding drouth damaged cornstalks if samples tested at the college of agriculture, University of Illinois, are typical of corn throughout the country, says Dr. Robert Graham, chief in animal pathology and hygiene.

Innumerable inquiries have been received by the University of Illinois pathological laboratory relative to the possible poisonous properties of drouth corn, as well as sudan grass, and apparently many stockmen are afraid to feed either of these roughages.

Of the many samples of suspicious drouth corn that have been tested in the laboratory, not a single specimen has proved to be poisonous, Doctor Graham said. Although it is known that sorghum plants can develop fatal amounts of hydrocyanic acid under arrested growth, the danger in the case of corn seems to be rather doubtful.

The poisonous properties of sudan grass have also been recognized during certain stages of growth, but here again bona fide evidence of injury when fed to live stock was not obtained in one instance.

Illness which may be mistaken for food poisoning is sometimes caused by too sudden change in rations, Doctor Graham points out.

Big Wheat Crop in Canada

The 1934 wheat crop of Canada is officially estimated at 277,904,000 bushels. This is an increase of about 7,000,000 bushels over the un-revised estimate for 1933, but is considerably lower than the average for recent years. Previous to 1933 the smallest Canadian wheat crop in the last ten years was 304,520,000 bushels in 1929; the highest was over 560,000,000 in 1928. The low 1934 production is due mainly to unfavorable climatic conditions in large areas of the western provinces where most of Canada's wheat is grown. The average wheat yield an acre for Canada in 1934 is placed at 11.6 bushels, compared with a long-time average of 17.1. The estimated production of other principal grains in Canada shows an increase over the previous year. Oats are up about 37,000,000 bushels, barley up about 5,440,000 bushels, rye up about 2,200,000 bushels, and flaxseed up about 400,000 bushels.

English Longbow Good Weapon

Old manuscripts say of the English longbow of the Fourteenth and Fifteenth centuries that its full cast was 300 yards. That was with an arrow with a sharpened steel broad-head point or with a bodkin point, a missile sufficiently strong and heavy to pierce armor at short range or fell a man at a distance almost as great as its maximum carry.
