

Costs Farmers Down and Prices Up

Meat Animals Are Up to 131, Chickens and Eggs at 126, Dairy Products at 102.

Business conditions appear to be favorable for maintaining at least the present level of demand for farm products through the next few months, according to the current summary of the agricultural situation and outlook report just issued by the extension economist at Oregon State college.

Prices paid by farmers for commodities bought, including interest and taxes paid, have not changed much recently. The composite index was last estimated at 128 per cent of the 1910-1914 level. This is one point lower than a month previous and a point below a year ago. While these prices paid have tended to remain about the same or go a little lower, prices received by farmers have risen in recent months, the report shows. As a consequence the relation of prices received to prices paid is now the highest in more than five years.

The general level of farm prices, both in the country as a whole and in Oregon, appears to be higher than at mid-September when it was 107 per cent of the pre-war average. This was up one point over the month previous and four points higher than in September, 1934.

Highest among the individual commodities on the index was meat animals at 131, chickens and eggs at 126, dairy products at 102 and truck crops at 101. Grains stood at 97 and fruits at 82, both lower than a year ago.

The index of Oregon farm prices, which is based on the 1926-1930 average instead of the pre-war period, shows a three point gain from 64 to 67 since September, 1934. A parity level, to use the familiar AAA term, would be an index of 96 per cent. Highest in the list of Oregon commodities, as compared with the 1926-1930 prices, are horses, hogs and eggs, while lowest are sheep, potatoes, hops, barley, oats and apples.

The general level of farm wage rates has shown the usual seasonal advance and is now nine points above a year ago and the highest in four years. Some decline in the supply of available farm labor appears to reflect the recent pick-up in industrial employment.

Dogs Kill Sheep.

Farmers of Lynx Hollow and Creswell lost a number of sheep Thursday and Friday nights of last week through attacks by dogs. Two dogs were believed responsible for all the killing.

One farmer lost six sheep, another four and two others one each.
