Grove I.O.O.F. Team Out of Tournament

The Cottage Grove I. O. O. F. quintet was defeated 40-27 by Wendling in the opener of district A. A. U. basketball tournament at Eugene Wednesday night.

The Cardinals, considered the leading Lane county independent quintet for the past five years, completely outclassed their southern rivals in the first half. Led by Dorsey the Wendling team took a commanding 32-8 lead at halftime. Cottage Grove came back strong in the second half, holding Wendling to 3 points in the third quarter and five more in the final period, totalling eight points during the last half while the I. O. O. F. team picked up 19 points. Goff had no trouble slitting the hoop, garnering 12 points for the Grovers.

Cottage Grove lost the valuable service of Bagley when coaches and referees were ruled ineligible.

GOLDEN PHANTOMS

Fascinating Tales of Lost Mines

by Edith L. Watson C. W. N. U.

THE FRENCHMEN'S HIDDEN TREASURE

IN SOUTHWESTERN Colorado near the summit of Wolf Creek pass may be seen a finely shaped hill known as Treasure mountain. It guards a park where gold has been concealed, and many things have happened in its shadow.

To begin at the known beginning, along about 1827 a band of trappers, gold hunters, and adventurers, most of them Frenchmen, left St. Louis and made their way to this section. They ranged about, looking for a place suited to their wants, and finally settled down. They sent to Taos for supplies, and stayed on for several years.

Then, late one summer, they grew lonesome for the pleasures of St. Louis and packed their accumulated gold for a trip to that city. Just as the pack train left camp, a band of extremely unfriendly Utes came by, attacked the men, and killed about half of them. The rest entrenched themselves to fight, and at the same time they managed to bury the gold and make some maps showing where it was hidden.

At last they managed to get away from the Utes, when they separated for greater safety and agreed to meet at St. Louis. Only two of them ever reached the rendezvous.

Some time later, a Frenchman appeared in the region of Treasure mountain. He said that he was merely prospecting, but he had some maps which (those who caught a glimpse of them said) looked queer indeed.

Presently he left the region—at any rate, he disappeared and never returned. But the maps came to light in the possession of some Mexicans, not those, however, who knew the Frenchman.

What these men did with the maps is hard to say. Certainly they kept them well out of sight, but the story leaked out and the general location became known. A man named Asa Poor heard of the strange maps and the marked cache. He recalled that there was a park where the trees bore just such blazes, and he went back to the place to make certain.

The signs were indeed there, but where they pointed Poor did not know. In hopes of getting some information on the general subject, he then asked the Indian agent for information from the Utes; the tribesmen professed to be ignorant. They had heard of such a happening, they said, but they remembered nothing.

Poor and a party of friends then tried to work out the puzzle themselves. They followed the blazes one way and another. They looked all about. At last they discovered a mound of earth—but on opening it there was nothing to be found.

Then a visitor came into the park who claimed that he had seen one of the maps. It had directions written out, he said, and one that he remembered read like this: "Stand on this mound at six o'clock on a September morning; where falls the shadow of the head, there dig for the buried treasure." Hopefully, the men did as the visitor suggested, but their hopes died when no gold resulted.

The next summer a man from Durango came with a divining rod. It showed no indication of gold at the place where Poor and his friends had labored so long.

And so the search has gone on from time to time, as confident seekers hunt for the Treasure mountain gold.

Lions Win From Dorena Lose to I. O. O. F. Team

(By Journalism Student.)

The Cottage Grove Lions split a double-header here Monday night, winning from Dorena high school 36-20 and dropping a close decision to the I. O. O. F. five 28-27.

The Dorena game was slow and unexciting as the Lions scored almost at will and had the ball in their possession most of the game. The Lions substituted for the Mapleton I. O. O. F. team as Mapleton was unable to come because of bad weather.

Tracy was the star for the Lions, scoring 17 points against Dorena and 10 points against the lodge team. Bagley led the lodge team, scoring 12 points against his high school proteges.
