"Drunk" Proves to Be Tough Customer With Bad Record

Picked up on the city streets Sunday afternoon by Chief of Police G. Pitcher, Fred Webster, apparently in a drunken condition, was lodged in the city jail. The decorations were apparently not to his liking there, for Webster proceeded to change them in a violent manner.

Before Chief Pitcher could summon assistance in the form of state police, Webster had broken all the glass windows in the jail, torn off and broken the radiator, lavatory and toilet. He was taken later in the afternoon to Eugene and appeared before the grand jury there Tuesday, according to reports.

Police believe Webster to be an ex-convict with a California police record. He was arrested by state police in Lane county a few weeks ago on another charge.

Ohio, Great Loss to Indians

To the Indians the loss of Ohio was felt more deeply than the loss of any other state, for it was their favorite hunting ground wherein roamed plentiful game of many species. Thus, according to a writer in the Cleveland Plain Dealer, when the region that furnished them food and clothing was being taken away from them, many of the natives violated practically all the treaties made with the white men who, too, wanted this land. To white men who came into this region, these savage battle cries were familiar. "No white man shall plant corn in the Ohio country" and "We will put out the fire of every pale-face on the Indian shore."

Commodore Perry's Notes

"We have met the enemy and they are ours." This brief note, hastily scribbled on the back of a letter by Commodore Perry to inform General Harrison of the victory on Lake Erie, has lived throughout the years as one of our great messages. Hardly an adult or school child in the country does not know this message by heart and what it means. However, the more carefully composed and more elaborate, formal dispatch which Perry sent to the secretary of war is scarcely known to exist. It reposes in the archives of Washington, where it is perused only by some researchers and students of American history. — Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Invented Non-Sinkable Boat

Joseph Francis, American inventor and boat builder, patented in 1837, a nonsinkable lifeboat which was widely used for several decades after 1850. He was the founder of the American Shipwreck and Humane society, developed a corrugated metal lifeboat and used his same invention in the construction of steamers. He received the Congressional Medal, the Franklin Institute Medal and International recognition for his work.

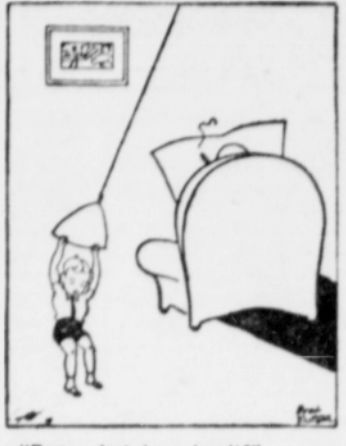

Elephants Careful

Elephants, when about to cross a stream or a marsh, carefully test the banks with their feet as in this country they do with bridges and railroad cars. Charles Darwin, in discussing their intelligence, makes special mention of this exploratory habit.

Sixth Wife of Henry VIII

Catherine Parr (1512-1548), queen of England, sixth wife of Henry VIII, was the daughter of Sir Thomas Parr, an office holder at the court of Henry VII. She had been twice widowed before Henry made her his wife, in 1543. She exerted a beneficent influence over the aging king, interceding in behalf of his daughters, whom she helped educate. At one time she barely escaped the fate of her queenly predecessors, but lived to become queen dowager and to wield considerable power at the start of the reign of Henry's son, Edward VI. She later married Baron Seymour of Sudeley, but died of puerperal fever shortly after the birth of a daughter.

Strange Accident to Craft

A strange accident happened to a strange craft in the Bay of Biscay in 1878. Cleopatra's Needle, a 200-ton obelisk, was being towed—on a giant iron cradle supported by pontoons—from Egypt to England by the S. S. Olga. During a storm the cables snapped and the craft, despite its great size, was not found for more than two months.—Collier's Weekly.

Co-operation Farmers' Hope.

The president of the North Dakota Farmers Union, Charles C. Talbot, is reported as having told members of the Oregon division of that organization that the cooperative movement was the American farmers' major hope. He deplored tendencies to exploit soil.

Steelheads in Luckiamute.

Steelheads, weighing from 6 to 8 pounds, were caught in the little Luckiamute river recently. Sportsmen have sworn that there were no steelheads in the west side branches of the Willamette river. The run is attributed to recent generous plantings of trout.

Winter Lingers.

Our cold showers of the past two or three days are attributed to the lingering of Old Man Winter in the lap of Spring. He scattered six inches of new snow over the tops of the Cascades above Oakridge Tuesday night and more fell Wednesday. Traffic, although slowed up, continued over Hogg Pass.

New Guffey Coal Bill.

Forty-eight hours after the Supreme Court found his coal conservation act unconstitutional, Senator Guffey introduced a substitute designed to meet the court's objections. The original provisions regulating wages and hours of labor are eliminated. The chief feature of the new measure is a provision giving district coal boards, set up as in the original act, the power to fix minimum prices based on production costs including labor.

Coast Area Shows Gain.

The Pacific coast area, which ranked second among state groups in volume of building construction during the first quarter of 1936, with a gain of more than 50 per cent over the same period in 1935, is credited with approximately one-quarter of the country's private residential building operations during March, according to the Department of Labor.

California showed the largest residential gains. Seventeen cities in that state reported a volume of $100,000 or more. In February it had but nine cities in that group. In February, 1935, it had but two and in March, 1935, there were only five.

"This increased volume of home building," it was pointed out by Jamieson Parker, state director of the F.H.A., "is reflected in the operations of the 63 insuring offices of our organization. The week ending April 18, for example, marked an all-time high for number and dollar volume of mortgages submitted for insurance. The total of $9,661,339 was a gain of more than $600,000 over the previous week."

E. T. Stells, formerly with the Manila branch of the National City Bank of New York, is one of the directors of the First Federal Savings and Loan association of Eugene. This association is a member of the Federal Home Loan Bank System and is chartered and supervised by the U. S. government.
