AUTO ACCIDENTS INCREASE

The past summer has been one of the worst on record in the matter of automobile accidents and deaths.

Do we hear someone say "women drivers of course?" Only 6 per cent of highway accidents involve women drivers, according to Prof. William J. Cox of Yale who has thoroughly investigated the matter. He says "if accidents are to be reduced, it will be accomplished through women. Men have had the problem 30 years and have done little about it."

The most dangerous driving months are commencing. The months of rain, snow, ice and few daylight hours. It is lamentable, but true, that the human element, according to statistics, is responsible for most of the accidents. "Excessive speed, passing on hills and curves, hogging the center line, weaving in and out of traffic and the 'save a minute' mania" are listed as the principle causes which call for headlines such as "Killed in Automobile Accident."

If your name appears in a list of the killed, whether through your carelessness, or that of another, you will be where you can't read it, but if the name of another appears in such a list through your carelessness, that will indeed be a different matter.

It has been said that "Memory is the book of judgment." It has also been said that "Memory is a scourge." It is a terrible thought that nothing is ever forgotten. The temperate habit of, or passion for reckless driving may, someday, leave you a memory of a dead face and a mangled body which will haunt you by day and in your dreams at night.

A BALANCED BUDGET.

President Roosevelt has stated, since the election, that he believed it would soon be possible to balance the budget and that he intended to do so at the earliest possible time. Some commentators close to the president have stated that the budget will be balanced at the end of the next fiscal year, which starts July this year. This is something to be hoped for as this cannot be accomplished so long as the government continues to spend more than it receives.

Even a balanced budget will still leave this country the tremendous job of reducing the large national debt to at least a normal level. If the president can accomplish both of these tasks within a reasonable time, he will justify his announced opinion that during a time of depression a country should spend beyond its receipts and, once a reasonable amount of recovery is achieved, reduce outgo and return to a business basis.

From press reports it seems that the president believes that the continued improvement in business will soon make emergency spending unnecessary and that, therefore, he is not in favor of the government continuing to spend large sums in excess of its income. However there can be no doubt but that he will continue relief expenditures as long as he deems them necessary.

Regardless of party affiliations every good citizen will not only wish the president success, but will do what they can to aid him in the gigantic task of balancing the budget and reducing the national debt.

THOSE WHO USE THE ROADS.

"The Willamina Times would do away with the milk control board as a useless commission, and the Cottage Grove Sentinel suggests that residents of smaller cities of the state should organize against the state highway commission that is routing main highways around business sections of cities."

"The policy of the state highway commission is to give first consideration to those who use the roads, but the milk board seems to give little consideration to those who use the milk. These policies are diametrically opposed, yet neither one is satisfactory, which may show that the people are hard to please. The highway commission ought to be able to follow a middle road and the milk control board might let bossy add a little more cream at the top of the bottle without hoisting the price three cents a quart. Ho-hum."—Portland Spectator.

Those who use the roads every day of every year, through spring, summer, fall and winter are the farmers, the inhabitants of small cities as well as those of the large cities, the laborers in the numerous sawmills and other industrial plants. These are also the people that pay the taxes which make road building possible.

The Sentinel cannot agree with The Spectator when it says: "The policy of the highway commission is to give first consideration to those who use the roads."

Long straight speedways are built for non-taxpayers from other states, who use the highways for three or four months during the year. If there are some taxpayers benefited they are not required to move their houses.

Taxes which are concealed in the cost of living are sometimes termed painless because the people who pay them do not know that they are included in the cost price of everything they pay, but they are the taxes which keep most of us hustling to keep out of the bread line.

STATE CAPITOL NEWS LETTER

The Legislature Is Under Way

Salem, Ore.—The stage is all set for the biennial session of the legislature which is scheduled to get under way next Monday for a run of 40 days or longer. The same arrangement will prevail as for the special session of 1935 with the House meeting in the Salem armory and the Senate in the dining room of the Marion hotel just across the alley. An enclosed passageway will connect the two buildings to permit the members and employees to go back and forth without danger of drowning in one of the frequent downpours that visit the Willamette valley at this time of year, or of freezing.

Organization of the two branches will probably be agreed upon at pre-session conferences to be held here some time Sunday. Already the choicest plums of the two organizations are definitely "in the bag" with Frank Franciscovich of Astoria slated to preside over the Senate and Harry Bolvin of Klamath Falls the majority choice as gavel wielder in the house. Fred Drager, veteran chief clerk of the House, is understood to be assured of a return to his old post in spite of the fact that he is a republican and the House is overwhelmingly democratic again. In the Senate John Hunt of Woodburn will again be at the chief clerk's desk with Mrs. Elizabeth Glatt of Woodburn as his assistant. Joe Singer, for many years—until 1935—segregated at arms in the house, is understood to be slated for a similar post in the Senate at the forthcoming session.

Harry Bolvin came up from Klamath Falls Saturday and has been spending the entire week in Salem and Portland putting the finishing touches to the House organization, preliminary to announcement of his committee assignments promptly after the session gets under way. Franciscovich has also been devoting much time in the past week to getting his senate organization rounded out although his problem is much simpler than that confronting Bolvin inasmuch as most of the senate members are veterans who will, for the most part, fit right back into their old committee jobs while the House organization must be rebuilt from the ground up.

Governor Martin has his opening message all ready for delivery. Advance information is that it will be brief and deal principally with the improved condition of the state's financial condition with a plea to the legislators to keep the state on an even keel and not upset the nicely balanced budget by an orgy of wild spending.

Predictions are that the session will run well over the 40 days for which the lawmakers are allowed to draw pay and that it will rank well up the list in the point of legislative quality. Outstanding among the problems to come before the session will be proposals to amend the Knox liquor control act and the milk control act, demands on the part of the counties and cities for a reallocation of highway revenues, labor legislation looking to compulsory arbitration of disputes between employers and employees when the public interest becomes involved, amendments to the several social security acts including an attempt to increase old age pensions and extend the pension act to include needy persons 65 years of age and over, proposal to repeal the certificate of necessity clause in the truck and bus act, an attempt to reorganize certain departments of the state government along the same lines as those proposed and defeated in the 1935 session and a program of state buildings including a new library and office building with purchase of additional land on which to locate the new buildings.

State Liquor Business.

From an original investment of $107,000 the state liquor commission in less than two years has built up a business grossing more than $7,000,000 annually and returning a profit in excess of $2,250,000 a year. The $107,000, borrowed from the general fund in 1934, was repaid this week together with $14,710 interest. State Treasurer Holman has seized upon the state's experience in financing this venture as an example of what could be done by way of saving interest payments to the taxpayers if all public fund surpluses—state, city, county and school district—were pooled under a plan similar to that in effect in West Virginia and invested, under proper safeguards, in bonds issued by state departments and the various political subdivisions. Under such a plan, Holman argues, the $10,000,000 a year now being paid by Oregon taxpayers to holders of public bonds could be kept in the public treasury.

More Money for Higher Education

The state board of higher education is asking for a legislative appropriation of $1,332,048 for support of the university, college and three normal schools. This is in addition to the revenues from the special millage levies estimated to raise $3,570,000 during the biennium. Even if the entire request is granted, the board points out, state support of higher education—appropriation and millage—will still be $778,089, or 13 percent, under that for 1929-30. At the same time student enrollment has shown a substantial increase in the past six years with an attendant increase in the cost of operating the five institutions. For the past six years higher education in Oregon has been financed entirely within the special millage revenues. Budget director Wharton has recommended an appropriation of $661,688 for higher education but in is understood that the board will carry its case to the legislature in a fight for the entire $1,332,048 which it claims to be necessary to keep the five institutions up to their present standards.

Snell Opposes Drivers' License Law Repeal.

Repeal of the present drivers' license law requiring periodic renewal of driving permits would be a serious mistake and a backward step in the opinion of Secretary of State Snell. Representative Hyde of Lane county has announced his intention of seeking a return to the old system of perpetual licenses. Even if the fees are not needed for the highway fund Snell urges the need of a periodic check-up on drivers in order to weed out the incompetent operators and instead of repealing the law would strengthen several of its features.

McColloch Resigns.

Frank C. McColloch has resigned as public utilities commissioner to become a senior partner in the law firm of Day, Hampson and Nelson in Portland. Prior to becoming utilities commissioner early in 1935 McColloch practiced law in Baker. His successor, N. G. Wallace of Bend, was a member of the state senate at the 1935 session filling out the unexpired term of Jay Up-ton of Bend.

Five New Buildings Erected at State Institutions.

Five new buildings erected at state institutions during the past biennium represent an investment of approximately $395,000 with the state paying 55 percent of the cost and the federal government 45 percent through its PWA. The $180,800 concrete dormitory at the state hospital for insane provides accommodations for 218 additional patients. Two new buildings have been erected at the tuberculosis hospital in Salem. One, a three-story brick structure, provides accommodations for members of the nursing staff and releases space in the old hospital building for ten more patients. The other is a one-story concrete hospital building of 40-bed capacity. Cost of the two is approximately $102,000. At the blind school a new two-story and basement brick dormitory costing approximately $82,000, provides sleeping quarters for 50 boys as well as hospital facilities and shops for instruction of students. A nurses home at the eastern Oregon tuberculosis hospital at The Dalles, costing approximately $27,000 completes the list.

State Roads Improved.

Approximately 655 miles of state roads were improved during 1935 according to R. H. Baldock, state highway engineer. The year's list of improvements also includes 36 bridges and 17 grade separations.

Ability of Queen Bees

The queen bee is able to lay either fertilized or unfertilized eggs, according to the size of the cells in which they are to develop. Fertilized eggs are laid either in small worker cells or in large irregular queen cells, and developed into queens or workers. Unfertilized eggs are laid in drone cells, and those that develop become drones.

THE CHURCHES

DO WE KNOW?

When we wake in the dawn of a radiant day
 And its beauty unfolds to the sight,
 While gratitude carries the heart away
 For protection and rest through the night;
 Do we know that each day as it slowly unfolds
 Is ordered in Love's great plan
 To radiate all the glory God holds
 Of heaven and earth and man?

When we pause in the rush of the noontide hour,
 With the cares of the day pressing hard,
 And commune with Him who alone is power,
 Whose government naught can retard—
 Do we hear in the tumult the still small voice
 That directs and protects and sustains?
 Does our innermost soul in assurance rejoice
 And know that our God still reigns?

When we rest in the quiet of eventide
 From the toils of the day set free,
 And we leave in His charge all those hours we tried
 To be all He would have us be—
 Do we know that our God neither slumbers nor sleeps,
 That His love is our shield and stay?
 That we rest secure in the watch He keeps,
 And arise to a better day?

The Golden Text was, "God is the Lord, which hath shewed us light" (Ps 118: 27).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: Hear, O Israel: The Lord our God is one Lord: And thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thine heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy might" (Deut. 6: 4, 5).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following correlative passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health by Mary Baker Eddy: "God is incorporeal, divine, supreme, infinite Mind, Spirit, Soul, Principle, Life, Truth, Love. Question.—Are these terms synonymous? A n s w e r.—They are. They refer to one absolute God. They are also intended to express the nature, essence, and wholeness of Deity . . . Principle and its idea is one, and this one is God, omnipotent, omniscient, and omnipresent Being, and His reflection is man and the universe" (pp. 465-6).
