STATE CAPITOL NEWS LETTER

New Laws Become Operative Sunday.

Salem, Ore.—Better watch your step Mr. and Mrs. Oregon. A long list of new rules and regulations governing your daily life becomes operative next Sunday when 343 statutes enacted by the recent legislature become effective.

But the situation is not as serious as it might appear at first glance. Most of the new acts are merely minor amendments to laws already on the statute books. A lot of the others are strictly local in their application, such, for instance, as those providing pay increases for county officials. A few of these local laws which will affect a lot of people having business at their respective court houses provide for Saturday afternoon half holidays for county offices. Employees of 17 counties, of which Lane is one, will enjoy this boon hereafter.

Three of the new statutes are under the shadow of the referendum and may not become operative until approved by the voters if the referendum petitions are completed in time. These are the slot machine and pin ball acts and the fair trade act.

Amendments to the hit-and-run driver act require the drivers to report any damage inflicted to an unattended vehicle and make accident reports strictly confidential.

One of the longest of the new laws is that providing numerous amendments to the unemployment compensation act.

A number of the new laws provide for reforms in judicial procedure. Others deal with the taking of crabs and clams and fishing, notably one classifying bullfrogs as game fish and requiring a license for catching the "croakers."

Promotions in National Guard.

A number of promotions and appointments were announced by Major General George A. White, commander of the Oregon National Guard this week. In the list are Clyde G. Young of Ashland, promoted to the rank of a major in the coast artillery corps; Hervey V. Ide of Gresham, appointed a second lieutenant of infantry, and Faye H. Stewart of Cottage Grove, appointed a second lieutenant in the coast artillery corps.

Bountiful Apportionment.

The state department this week was called on to apportion the sum of $16.83 among the 36 counties. The amount represents the state's five percent of land sales from the public domain during the year. Harney county topped the list with $1.75 although Malheur with $1.74 as its share was a close second. Multnomah, the largest county in point of population, received the smallest "cut," only 8 cents and Hood River county received a check for 9 cents.

As his only official act during the absence of Governor Martin from the state Governor F. M. Franciscovich issued a call for a meeting of the interim committee on new revenue sources to be held at the office of the state tax commission in Salem June 9.

What, Reject Federal Aid?

Unless Public Works administration officials can be persuaded to make the new state building grant on the same terms as the capitol grant the Capitol Reconstruction commission may reject federal aid entirely and confine its new building program to a single structure. Ralph Moody, assistant attorney general, who has been assisting the commission as legal advisor is now in Washington in an effort to straighten out the financial tangle. When Governor Martin returned from his trip to Washington a month ago he thought that it was definitely understood that the Public Works Administration was ready to contribute $450,000 to Oregon as an outright grant with no strings attached. It has since developed, however, that this was not the case. The proffered gift has so many strings attached to it as to make it almost impossible of acceptance. One of the conditions of the grant is that actual construction work must be under way by August 2 and the building completed by July, 1938. Another requirement imposed is that the state appropriation as well as the federal grant money be placed in a special building fund and deposited in an approved federal guarantee bank. Moody before leaving for Washington expressed the belief that federal officials would be willing to revise the terms of the grant so that the entire $1,000,000 would be available for the new building program.

New Tuberculosis Hospital.

Mayor Carson of Portland has urged the state board of control to take immediate steps toward the construction of the new tuberculosis hospital in Multnomah county. Construction of the hospital was authorized by the voters of Oregon in May, 1934, and the recent legislature appropriated $110,000 to finance the building. The state appropriation, however, was made contingent upon an additional $90,000 being raised through a Public Works Administration grant or from some other source.

Reappointments.

Reappointment of Earl L. Fisher and Chas. V. Galloway as members of the state tax commission is expected this week. The terms of the two commissioners expire Thursday of this week. Some objection has been raised to Fisher by individuals with large incomes but it is not believed that these objections are serious enough to influence the board of control to make a change in the personnel of the commission at this time.

Numerous inquiries are being received by the board of control from individuals, real estate dealers, community clubs and civic organizations with buildings and building sites for sale in the city of Portland but so far no definite proposal has been received from any property owner who is willing to sell on the terms laid down by the recent legislature for the acquisition of an office building in the metropolis. A number of east side organizations are urging the construction of a modern office building on the central east side and at least one organization wants the state to build on a block located between the Multnomah county court house and the Portland city hall.

Taylor Grazing Fund Distribution.

Six eastern Oregon counties participated in the distribution of $3,801.83 in Taylor Grazing act funds this week. The distribution was made by Secretary Snell. Harney county received the largest amount, $1607.86. Lake county was next with $1467.05. Malheur's share was $227.97 and Deschutes county received $36.43.

State House Corner Stone Laying June 17.

Civil and military dignitaries of the state will join in the ceremonies accompanying the laying of the corner stone for the new state house on June 17 according to plans announced this week. A caravan of several hundred cars is expected from Portland. Governor Martin will be the principal speaker at the dedication ceremonies which are scheduled to begin at 2 p. m.

County Roads Need Attention.

Members of the county court expect to go before the state highway commission June 3 at Salem to ask a 50 per cent reduction in the amount of gas tax money payable to the commission this year in order to use the money to repair and rebuild county roads. The county has been paying $85,000 to the state highway commission each year in payment for a sum advanced by the commission to construct roads in Lane county some years ago. The county still owes $264,000, and if the commission grants the postponement of payments this year, it will take six years instead of three to finish paying back the money.

Larger Lane Delegation Will Attend 4-H Summer School.

One hundred and seven 4-H club members from Lane county are planning to attend the 4-H club summer school at Corvallis beginning June 7, said R. C. Kuehner, club leader. A round-trip fare from Cottage Grove will be $1.45. KOAC will broadcast the programs twice daily, from 2 to 3 p. m. and from 7 to 7:45 p. m.

Tax turnovers for the past two weeks at the county treasurer's office are as follows: 1937, $10,713.84; and for the years 1927 to 1936, $14,188.38.

Anti-price Discrimination Bill Will Be Submitted to Voters.

Checking of the eligibility of voters' names on the anti-price discrimination bill petition for referendum has been finished at the county clerk's office according to Walter B. Dillard, county clerk. There will be at least 500 names over the required number and so the measure will go on the ballot for the next general election.

The county offices are using envelopes printed with small pictures advertising the Oregon Trail pageant. The prints show the covered wagons, oxen, and pioneers, and contain the dates of the show. The county has set aside $1,000 and the Pageant association $2,000 for materials to build the new grandstand for the pageant. The structure will seat 7,000. The WPJA is furnishing the labor for the construction of the grandstand.

A divorce complaint has been filed by Kathryn L. Kramer, plaintiff, against Louis S. Kramer, defendant, in the clerk's office.

Lane Nurses Attend Convention.

The five nurses from the county health office attended a convention of Oregon state graduate and public health nurses held in Portland May 27 to 29. Panel discussions of problems interesting to nurses were held and there were several speakers. Friday the delegates were taken to Bonneville dam and Mt. Hood.

Four new cases of tuberculosis were discovered during the past week according to Dr. Gardner. Two of these were children who had the children's type; and two were adults, one being in an advanced stage. A more extensive tuberculosis program is being planned Dr. Gardner reports. A case of infantile paralysis has been reported from the Eugene district, but it is not serious.

Little Change in Lane Sawmill Appraisments.

J. S. Gilkey, from the tax office, turned in his report on Lane sawmills which he has been appraising for the past 10 days. Very little change was made in the assessments, reports the county assessor, but there were a few new mills and some new machinery.
