Lord Petre's Castle

Ingatstone Hall in Essex for four centuries has been the seat of Lord Petre. The vast estates are about the only ones left in England whose ownership was confirmed to the family by papal bull. The hall has Norman and Tudor sections and mysterious underground passages around which many a legend lingers.

Hair Has No Roots

Hair has no roots. The hair-shaft grows from a socket in the scalp, says a writer in Literary Digest. The vital growing part is a strand of cells fastened to its lower end. As the hair grows, it gets old, tends to fall out naturally after a few months. But a new hair will replace it, provided the vital cells are undamaged. About forty old hairs normally fall daily from a healthy scalp.

Wormwood Crown for Brides

Russian peasants crown the prospective bride with a garland of wormwood, to denote the trials and bitterness of marriage.

Richard Vandeventer, Native of This City, Dies at Roseburg

Richard Vandeventer of Drain, a native of this city, died last week in Roseburg and funeral services were held Friday afternoon at the Drain M. E. church. Interment was in the Yoncalla Masonic cemetery with the Masonic lodge in charge.

Mr. Vandeventer was born in Cottage Grove April 18, 1865. He lived here for a number of years, removing in 1886 to Crook county near Prineville, where he engaged in the cattle business and also was stock inspector and deputy sheriff. He was married to Miss Lottie M. Hobbs in 1900 in Portland. In 1909 he moved to Eugene, where he operated a grocery store for seven years. He then moved to Rice valley and operated a stock ranch. Later he moved to Drain, where for the past seven years he was deputy sheriff and city marshal.

The Vandeventers are a pioneer Lane county family. Jack Vandeventer, father of Richard, came to California in 1848 and moved to Lane county in 1850. Richard's mother was killed by Indians.

Surviving relatives include the widow, two daughters, Mrs. Verne Cannon of Oroville, Cal., and Mrs. Lillian Hull of Klamath Falls; one son, Maxwell Vandeventer of Dunsmuir, Cal.; one brother, William Vandeventer of Bend, and nine grandchildren.

Mr. Vandeventer was an honor member of the A. F. & A. M. lodge of Prineville.

Oregon's Traffic Deaths

A Series of Weekly Articles on the Problem of Highway Safety By Earl Snell, Secretary of State

Two out of every five victims of traffic accidents are pedestrians. Of the 37,800 fatalities in 1936, pedestrians made up 15,100. Clearly, no safety campaign can be complete that does not include consideration of the pedestrian.

This is especially true on account of the fact that such a large number of the pedestrian victims are little children and elderly people. Intelligent driving and proper care by the motor car operator will naturally solve a considerable part of this problem, but many, many accidents, especially in cities, can be avoided by proper use of the streets by the people "on foot."

Most of these fatalities occurred in cities, the greater part at intersections. The deaths among people walking along the highways in rural sections totaled 2,450, and the toll among children playing on the roadways was a serious matter. These are accidents that are especially tragic on account of the fact that they could be so easily avoided.

Schools are doing a fine work in training children to be constantly aware of the hazards of traffic. But it is a work that must be carried on constantly, that requires repeated instruction and warning.

Do not walk on the highway at night dressed in dark clothes. Be sure of a clear right of way when crossing the streets. Do not cross between intersections. Obey rules of common sense at all times, and help eliminate Oregon's traffic deaths.

Lightning 'Flash' Illusory

J. H. Chambers and Son Redecorate Offices

Home Building Increasing

The big news in Pacific Northwest construction activity during the first half of 1937 was the extraordinary revival of home building, which scored an 81% increase, while commercial, industrial and public building failed to meet the level of a year ago. Twenty-seven key cities reported that of this year's total volume of permit activity $7,417,287 was for homes, while home permits for the first 6 months of last year were $4,123,363.

PAGEANT FIGURES ATTRACTING ATTENTION

Life-like figures, used by McMorran and Washburne in both their window display and parade entry in the recent Oregon Trail pageant and made by Mrs. Anna Rissue of this city, are on display in the window of the Smith-Short grocery and are attracting much interest and receiving much favorable comment. The group includes a man on horseback, a woman riding a saddle and several men and women sitting and standing. The figures are garbed in costumes of the pioneer days. The figures are faithfully executed to each minute detail.

Mrs. Rissue makes her models from papier-mache. For her animals she uses a skeleton of tin cans and wires, modeling over this.
