Stradivari Improved on His Violins Every Year

The first violins made by Antonio Stradivari were of poor-quality material, varnished in a thick yellow varnish, and of a solid build and proportions following those of Amati's smaller pattern. This small pattern Stradivari adhered to, with one exception, until 1684, when he turned his attention definitely to larger instruments. While he proved himself an uncommonly skilled craftsman in these early violins, says a writer in the Washington Star, it was not until the years between 1684 and 1700 that he showed progress in those experiments which were to culminate in perfect form and balance in his instruments.

In 1688 there appeared the first marked alteration in the detail of his work, when he outlined the curves of the scroll and the back rib of the scroll in black. Every year he gained in the beauty, accuracy and finish of his work, in the cutting of the "f" holes, the carving of his scrolls, and the exquisite precision of the purfling. In 1690, to crown his perfect craftsmanship, he built the "long Strad" to a new set of proportions, suggested by a Maggini violin which he had seen. Searching for increased tone value, he gradually increased the breadth of his instruments year by year.

There was a change, too, in the varnish used by Stradivari after 1684. It became deeper in color, and on the "long Strads" it is rich amber and light red.

Stradivari adopted this "long" pattern almost entirely until 1698, when he returned to proportions used previous to 1690.

Jurisdiction Over Lakes

Shared by U. S., Canada

The boundary between the United States and Canada runs through the center of the four border lakes and their connecting channels (Lake Michigan, of course, being entirely within the United States); and jurisdiction over the lakes is shared by the two countries, observes a writer in the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Both countries have an interest in maintaining the natural level of the lakes in order to keep the water power at Sault Ste. Marie and at Niagara undiminished, and in order that the depth of harbors and the channels connecting the lakes may not be lessened.

There is a permanent International Waterways commission, consisting of three Americans and three Canadians, that has control of the waters of the lakes for power and other purposes.

Within the territory of the United States, shipping and navigation are subject to the same laws and regulations as prevail on the other natural waterways of the United States. On the Canadian side shipping observes the Canadian laws. Each country provides the necessary aids to navigation at its own ports.

Lilies Mentioned in Bible

Lilies have been known since time immemorial. The Bible mentions lilies on several occasions. One of the legends pertaining to lilies is that Christ, while walking through the garden of Gethsemane, saw many flowers which drooped their heads in humility as He passed. One of the lilies, however, kept its head aloft and upon seeing the visage of Christ immediately dropped its head. To this day many varieties of lilies still hold their heads in apparent humiliation. The lily signifies purity. The early Greeks and Romans crowned the bride and groom with lilies and wheat. In Spain lilies were supposed to restore human form to those who were bewitched. The lilies of Caucasus are supposed to change color, according to mythologists. If a lover gave his betrothed red lilies which indicated that he was true to her and if upon receiving them the maiden noticed that they changed to yellow it was a sure indication that the boy friend was unfaithful.

Do you want to SAVE MONEY?

The Standard Ford V-8, with 60-horsepower engine, gives you a lot of car for a little money.

300,000 new owners acclaimed the "thrifty 60" last year. Hundreds a day are buying it in 1938. Why?

Because it is priced low—includes essential equipment without extra charge—and goes farther between filling stations than any Ford car ever built. Owners all over the country report averages of 22 to 27 miles on a single gallon of gasoline.

But economy isn't all the story by any means. The Standard "60" is built with the same precision as the De Luxe "85," and has the same 112-inch wheelbase chassis. It is easy to look at and ride in—as well as easy to buy and run.

There's a Ford dealer near you.
