Tremendous Trifles

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

"UNLESS"

"THE department commander places too much confidence in your zeal, energy and ability to wish to impose on you precise orders which might hamper your action when nearly in contact with the enemy. He will, however, indicate to you his own views of what your action should be, and he desires that you should conform to them, unless you should see sufficient reasons for departing from them."

It was June, 1876, in Montana. Gen. George Armstrong Custer, riding at the head of the Seventh cavalry in search of a big village of hostile Indians, pondered over these orders from his commander, Gen. A. H. Terry. He knew the plan of campaign—Terry and Gibbon and he were to strike at the same time. And that time was June 26.

But Custer was "in bad" with President Grant. If, unaided by the others, he scored a smashing victory, he might get back into the good graces of the President.

On the morning of June 25 his scouts reported the discovery of the Indian village. He was 24 hours ahead of the appointed time. But here were the Indians.

He remembered Terry's orders . . . "he desires that you should conform to them." And yet—"unless you should see sufficient reasons for departing from them."

So he decided to attack. And on that word "unless" hung his life and the lives of 300 men of the Seventh cavalry. For that many perished, or died later of their wounds, in "Custer's Last Battle."

TRAPSHOOTERS INVITED TO CORVALLIS SHOOT

Cottage Grove trapshooters have been extended an invitation to participate in the Mark Rickard Memorial shoot at Corvallis next Sunday, and a number of local men including Victor Chambers, Kelly Cooper, Harry Rentle and N. J. Nelson plan to attend.

Others from here will join them if conditions permit. The Corvallis shoot is a "practice" or preliminary to the Pacific International shoot to be held later in the month at Portland. The Portland shoot is one of the largest in the United States. Kelly Cooper, who ran 128 birds without a miss at the state shoot at Bend has received a number of awards since the close of the shoot, for his record there.
