H. U. (U. S.) GRANT

WHEN the first-born son of Jesse Root Grant and Hannah Simpson Grant was six weeks old, his relatives wrote their choice of names for him on slips of paper, folded them, then drew one. It was "Ulysses." Later Jesse Grant added "Hiram" to it.

As the boy grew older he didn't care so much for "Ulysses" because village wits pretended it was pronounced "Useless." Congressman Thomas L. Hamer, writing out Grant's appointment to the United States Military academy, couldn't remember if he had a middle name. But he did recall that the boy's mother was a Simpson. So he wrote it "Ulysses Simpson Grant."

On May 29, 1839, Ulysses Hiram Grant registered at West Point. "But," protested the adjutant, "this appointment is for Ulysses Simpson Grant." "All right—Ulysses Simpson Grant it is," he replied. And "U. S." Grant he became.

The Civil war brought new meaning to that "U. S." After Fort Donelson it stood for "Unconditional Surrender," and as a commander of the victorious Union army in 1865, it was easy to believe that it also stood for "United States." Both meanings were easy to remember when it was time to elect a President in 1869. World things have been the same if his initials had remained "H. U." or "U. H.?"
