STATE CAPITOL NEWS LETTER

Salem. — With more than 40 percent of its authorized appropriation for 1937-38 still available and only five more months to go the state relief fund is in excellent condition, according to figures compiled by Secretary of State Snell. In fact, with more than $2,500,000 available from the appropriation against liquor revenues it does not appear now that it will be necessary to draw against the general fund appropriation of $1,500,000 set up by the last session as a cushion against any possible emergency.

Relief needs, however, are draining the state fund faster than liquor revenues can replenish the pot with a prospect that it may be necessary to again resort to certificates of indebtedness as it was in the early experience with this type of relief financing back in 1935 when $1,765,000 worth of this paper was outstanding at one time.

At the outset of the current biennium there was made available for relief expenditures from state revenues a total of $8,953,570.26. Of this amount $183,956.06 represented the cash balance on hand at the end of the previous biennium. In addition to this there was $1,706,867.83 still due from liquor revenues under a previous authorization and $562,746.37 in old age pensions unexpended from the 1935 appropriation. To supplement these balances the legislature of 1937 authorized an additional $5,000,000 of liquor profits and set aside $1,500,000 from the general fund to be used only if and when the liquor revenues were exhausted.

To date there has been expended during this biennium a total of $4,943,112.19. This is at the rate of $253,492.93 a month. Offsetting this expenditure liquor profits have been pouring in an average of $218,438.96 a month back into the fund. This revenue has been approximately $35,000 a month short of the output with the result that the cash balance as well as the balance remaining in the old age pension appropriation at the beginning of the biennium have both been practically exhausted.

More men were employed in Oregon industries during the fiscal year ending July 1, last, than at any other time in the history of the state, according to records of the Industrial Accident commission. While the commission's figures cover only those industries protected by the Workmen's Compensation act they are said to reflect fairly accurately industrial conditions generally throughout the state. An average of 111,876 men were on full time employment in industries covered by the report during the year, an increase of 2.55 per cent over the previous fiscal year.

NEW IRRIGATION HOURS. For the convenience of local water users and because of a temporary water shortage, a change in the irrigation hours has been instituted, it was announced at the city office this morning. Irrigation hours have been changed from 5:00 to 8:00 p. m. each day instead of 6:00 to 9:00 p. m. and patrons are asked to observe this change.

For the first time in ten or twelve years the city has found it necessary to restrict the use of water for irrigation due to the lack of rains this summer. The water situation, however has improved and there is more water in the reservoir. The change in hours is a modification of the former order and gives water users more convenient hours in which to irrigate.
