WEIGHT OF BIG LOCOMOTIVE ON GEARS OF AUTO

Imagine a giant locomotive bearing down on the rear gears of your automobile. Motorists who seldom think of what happens in the inner workings of their cars will be amazed to learn that when they drive, the rear gears are actually subjected to enormous pressures of 71,900 to 109,200 pounds per square inch.

It's just as though each gear tooth were pushing the weight of a locomotive, automotive engineers say.

Another startler, revealed by engineers, is that the pinion gear actually "slides" along the ring gear at speeds varying from 16.7 to 26.75 feet per second.

"Realizing the heavy weights and rapid speeds to which these vital parts are subjected, it's no wonder many motorists think something may break when they step on the gas, especially on cold winter days," declares Albert E. Horn, Jr., Northwest General Manager of General Petroleum.

However, we have nothing to fear, if the gears are cushioned with special Winter lubricant. This lubricant stands the speed and pressure, functioning freely when the weather gets down to freezing or zero.

"To avoid trouble gear cases should be inspected now."

"EVERYTHING FOR MEN"
A. W. HELLIWELL

Storm warning flags are displayed in windows around town this week.

They have been posted to warn a great army of car-throttle pushers that cold weather is in the offing.

Proposing to protect motorists from breakdowns, bearing and gear failures, tire punctures and blowouts, battery and light failures, cooling system and spark plug difficulties and other mishaps that may result from a change to lower temperature, operators of local Mobilgas stations are making a dramatic introduction to this Winterproof campaign.

Offering free inspections of 12 vital car parts, in avoidance of seasonal mishaps, the Mobilgas men explain that Winterproofing is merely the proper safeguarding of cars against the ravages of cold, wet weather, and the resultant expense and discomfort.

"Inspection of automobiles and changing weights of oils and greases as cold weather approaches, declares A. W. Grant, Branch Manager of General Petroleum, is just as essential to the health and performance of an automobile as changing of garments is to the health and comfort of the man behind the wheel.

"It's a wise and essential precaution to drain out all the Summer's accumulation of grit and grime and take a fresh start with pure, clean products, especially created for maintaining efficiency during the Winter weather.

"To start quickly, shift gears easily, avoid radiator and battery troubles, prevent blowouts, and get full power, pickup and pep from one's automobile—to really enjoy Winter driving and play safe against breakdowns and delays. These are the reasons why this Winterproof service is offered to the motoring public."
