Tops in Dessert

When it comes to desserts there is none more acceptable than ice cream. No matter how many new desserts are offered us, no matter how much the unusual in their preparation attracts us, ice cream still stays at the top of the list of favorites.

That this popularity is deserving is not only shown by this enthusiasm for it, shared by adults and children alike, but because it is a really good food and has a definite place in the diet. The food value of ice cream is high. Made from milk, cream, eggs and fruits, ice cream becomes a food high in protective values, as its ingredients are among our chief protective foods.

This just right dessert can be had with little or no effort, whether it is for the most informal of family meals or the most elaborate of dinner parties.
